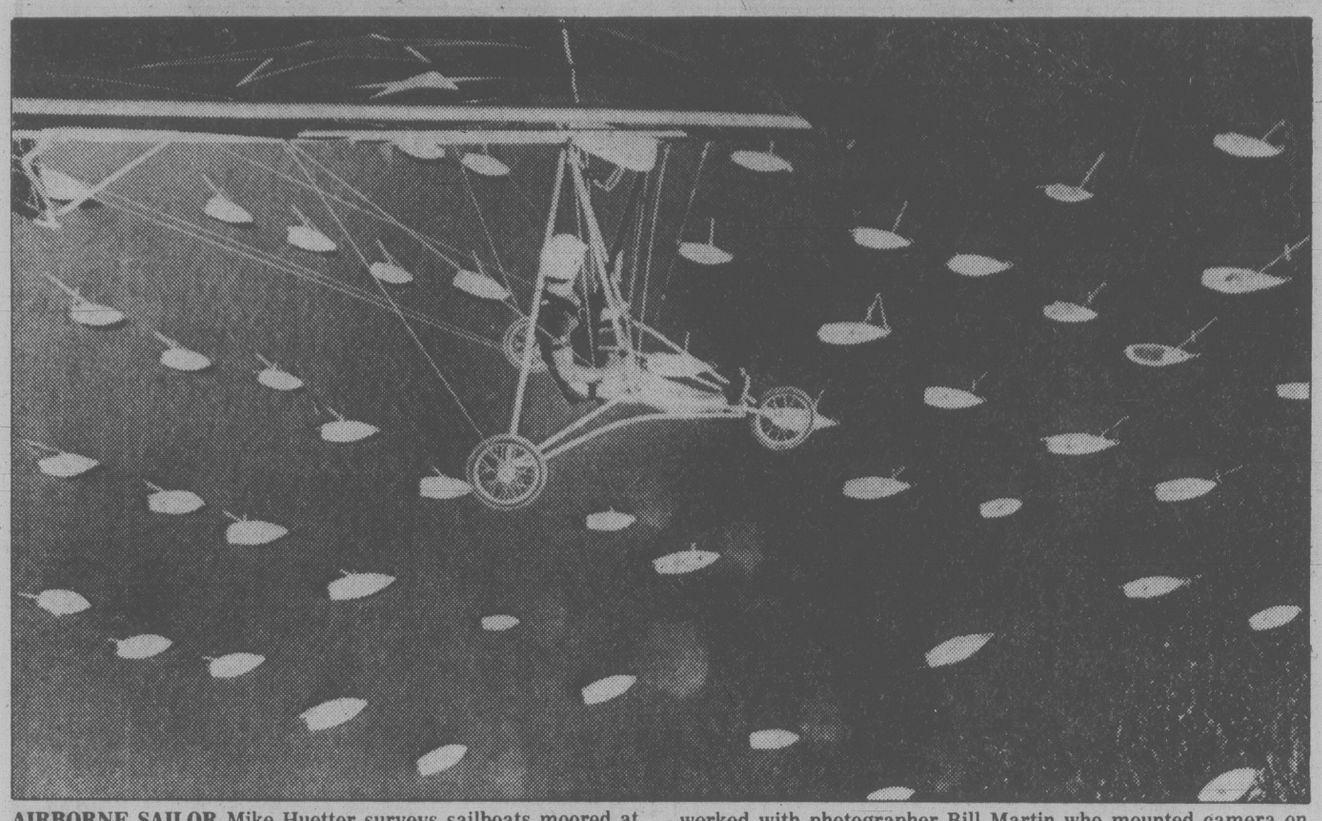
BC Rail to seek LRB action



AIRBORNE SAILOR Mike Huetter surveys sailboats moored at Dinner Key yacht basin off Coconut Grove, Fla., from ultra-light motorized sail plane. Huetter, who designed and built craft, worked with photographer Bill Martin who mounted camera on the wing tip. Huetter got the picture during the flight by firing a remote shutter mechanism located at his fingertips.

B.C. Rail management will go before the Labor Relations Board to demand a full return to work on the government-owned railways, Labor Minister Jack Heinrich said today.

The minister said he expects the joint council of rail unions to back up management's demand that members of the United Transportation Union stop picketing and go back to their jobs.

The joint council was meeting today in Vancouver.

Heinrich, who put together the agreement that was to end the month-long BCR strike, said he will not become involved in the application to the LRB.

UTU members are objecting to changes in method of payment designed by Heinrich, but the minister said he won't make any changes in his settlement proposal.

"I am not prepared to negotiate the proposal of settlement under any circumstances," he said. "That was well thought out. It was extremely fair.

"I think you will find, when everything settles down, that by far the majority of train men are pleased with the proposal."

The minister said when the unions agreed to put his settlement package before their members, they also agreed to return to work and he expects that commitment to be honored.

"It is interesting to note there are a number of statesmen in the trade union movement who are saying that what is happening now is unacceptable practice," he said.

Disgruntled members of the United Transportation Union set up picket lines Tuesday night at the BCR yard at Squamish, 60 kilometres north of Vancouver.

There was no work being done at Squamish, but trains from North Vancouver were moving through without difficulty early today.

The settlement to end the crippling strike had suggested workers be paid overtime based on hours worked. Trainmen want overtime calculated by hours and distance.

Members of the union say that under Heinrich's proposal they could lose up to $120 a week in overtime pay.

The spokesman said the union is taking the action to force Heinrich to order rail employees back to work by invoking the Essential Services Act and thereby returning their previous overtime pay rights.

Heinrich had resisted demands from forest industry leaders and Interior community mayors to order rail employees back to work to end the crippling economic effects of the strike.

He said he favors a settlement reached through the bargaining process.

Rail employees had returned to work Tuesday morning but the truce was a shaky one.

A union spokesman said although the men went back, this did not mean that they were happy.

'Big bucks' on 17-hour work days

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ray Rebagliati is a hard-working conductor on the B.C. Railway — so hard-working that he grossed $69,500 last year.

He earned his money by working about 17 hours a day, seven days a week, 10 months of the year on work trains along the northern sections of the line.

"You have to work to make big bucks and retire early," he says. "You have to get your fanny away from home, the television set, the beer hall and the pool room."

Rebagliati, 55, had planned to retire on a $1,400 a month pension this spring until his work was interrupted by the lengthy B.C. Rail strike. Now he says he'll delay retirement so that he can collect another $209 a month under the early retirment proposal made by the railway.

The railway wants to reduce train crews to three from four men by eliminating one of two brakemen through attrition. It has proposed early retirement for 38 trainmen, based on seniority.

Rebagliati, who's fourth from the top in seniority, would be among those eligible for the benefit, but he has to wait for a government fact-finder to sort out the issues, including safety, and make recommendations by Sept. 30.

Rebagliati says the long hours of work were not difficult.

"I'm always up at five in the morning and never sleep more than five hours a day while working or on holidays."

Rebagliati is "as rare as a dinosaur walking down Granville Street in 1980," said Norm Farley, chairman of the Joint Council of Railway Unions.

"I doubt if there are more than one in 1,000 making that kind of money," Farley said.

However, Rebagliati says he knows an engineman who lives in West Vancover and made $65,000 last year despite working one month less than he did.

Liberals widen Gallup lead

OTTAWA (CP) — Three weeks after the Feb. 18 election was called, the Liberal party had marginally stretched its lead over the Progressive Conservatives from 20 to 21 percentage points, according to a Gallup poll released today. (Other election stories on pages 41 and 42).

The poll, by the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion, conducted Jan. 3-5, shows the Liberals are supported by 49 per cent of Canadians who have made up their minds on how they are going to vote. That is an increase of two per cent since the December survey.

The Conservatives have the support of 28 per cent of the decided vote, up from 27 per cent in December, while the New Democratic Party checked in with 20 per cent, a drop of three points in the intervening month.

In Toronto, Clark said on an open-line radio show that the Conservatives do not consider themselves as far back as indicated in the poll. He said he made a mistake after his election "in paying too much attention to government and not enough to public relations."

The major change discovered by the polls took place in the undecided category. In December, 27 per cent of the voters had not made up their minds or would not say who they would support if an election were called.

In January, that figure dropped to 20 per cent.

The worst news for the Conservatives came in the regional breakdown of the figures, which showed them trailing the Liberals badly in strategic Ontario, which elects 95 of the 282 MPs in the House of Commons.

The Gallup poll indicated the Liberal lead in Ontario is only slightly less than the 20-point margin they enjoy in the country as a whole.

In Quebec, which sends 75 MPs to the Commons, the Liberals held a mammoth lead. Gallup found they had the support of 75 per cent of the decided electorate, compared to 61.9 per cent in the last election.

In the West, the Conservatives remain ahead but their lead has been pared about five per cent.

Carter may restore draft

Times News Services

In the face of the Soviet Union's muscle-flexing in Afghanistan and the anti-American challenge in Iran, President Carter is thinking about bringing back draft registration.

Administration and White House officials said the president has looked into the possibility of unveiling a registration proposal in his State of the Union message tonight, but they denied knowing his decision.

They said the proposal considered by the president would require men between the ages of 18 and 26 to register for the draft.

The military-age men might also be required to take physical examinations, but could not be actually drafted or inducted into the armed services.

The Selective Service Act gives the president the authority to order registration and examination, but an act of Congress is required to reimpose the actual draft.

The proposal, officials said, was independent of a military mobilization study being completed by the White House at the request of Congress.

All branches of the military fell short of recruitment goals for fiscal 1979, for the

Cab firms want 26% fare hike

Bluebird Cabs and Victoria Taxi Ltd. have applied to city hall for an increase in rates of about 26 per cent.

W.B. Woodward and J.F. MacLean, on behalf of the two companies and the Greater Victoria Taxi Owners Association want the mileage charge increased from 90 cents a mile to 70 per kilometre or approximately $1.13 per mile.

The flag fall would increase to $1.10 from $1 and waiting time would increase to $15 an hour from $12.

Th existing rates were set in March last year but taxi owners claim rising costs have forced them to apply for another rate hike. They claim their profit margin is only 3.2 cents per dollar.

The cab owners are also asking for a moratorium on any future increases in the number of taxi licences issued by the city.

Gold rebounds after nosedive

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold rebounded in late European trading today and neared the $700 U.S. mark after dropping below $600 in early trading. The U.S. dollar was mixed.

The afternoon fixing price for gold in London was $695 U.S. — $807 Canadian — a troy ounce, up sharply from the $585 low reached earlier in the day in European trading as Tuesday's price slide continued.

The gold price dropped $209.65 in Hong Kong to close at $624.74 an ounce. The metal had opened in the Far East centre at $685.48 and fell all day.

Bullion opened in London at $615 and Zurich at $605 and dropped as low as $585 before making a comeback. The morning fixing price in London was $650 an ounce.

Clerk foils holdup

A 16-year-old boy faces an attempted holdup charge after a pedestrian grabbed him Tuesday afternoon as he fled a corner grocery store in Fairfield.

City police said a youth walked into the C & K Market, 451 Cook, at 3:55 and demanded money, pretending he had a weapon in a paper bag.

But the woman clerk refused and ran outside screaming for help, the youth right behind.

A passerby grabbed him and held him until police arrived.

Police said a knife was found inside the bag.

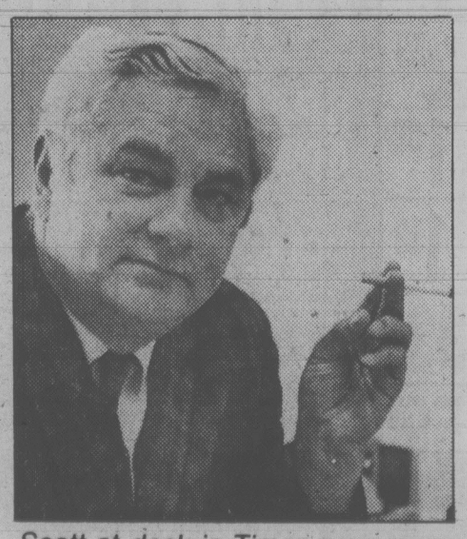
Fog stops air traffic

All flights at both the Inner Harbor and Victoria Airport were cancelled this morning after fog cut visibility to zero.

The B.C. Ferries service was not interrupted except for the Brentwood-Mill Bay ferry, which is without radar.

Fog over the Vancouver area also made driving hazardous and delayed some flights to and from Vancouver International Airport.

Death takes Jack Scott, 64



Scott at desk in Times newsroom

Jack Scott, award-winning journalist and former Times columnist, died Tuesday at his Salt Spring Island home. He was 64.

He had suffered two strokes in the past seven years and had been ill for several months.

Scott came to the Times in January, 1970, after 40 years in the newspaper business and a distinguished career which took him around the world and put him on the scene of many major historical news events.

He wrote a daily column in the Times until about four years ago, the topics and approach varying from a serious look at social and political issues of the day to a gentle, humorous view of everyday problems and situations or an insightful poke at some sacred cow.

Following his retirement, he continued up until a short time ago to write book reviews for the newspaper and occasional articles for the Vancouver Sun.

Scott was born in Vancouver, the son of a newspaperman, and he began his career early starting out as a copy boy for the News-Herald in Vancouver when he was 15.

He soon became the city editor and worked alongside a man who was also to become a well-known Canadian writer, Pierre Berton.

Scott wrote a column called Our Town in the News Herald for three years.

During the Second World War, he served four years in the Canadian Army. He enlisted in the Intelligence Corps and was later attached to the Public Relations section. In this capacity he broadcast from the Western Front for a year for the BBC and the CBC.

He then became editor of the Maple Leaf, the Canadian Army newspaper in London and in Germany. He was discharged in Vancouver with the rank of captain.

Scott then joined the Vancouver Sun, and in June, 1946, began writing his Our Town column which became widely read.

More than 12 years later, September, 1958, he was appointed the Sun's managing editor by publisher Donald Cromie.

The posting only lasted for about five months but as one newspaperman who remembers says "they were wild and crazy times and everyone had a ball."

Scott, for example, tossed established practices to the winds and sent his sports editor to interview Chiang Kai-shek and his women's page editor to Cuba to cover the aftermath of the revolution.

It all came to an end when Scott was appointed the Sun's London correspondent.

During his career, he won a number of awards including the National Newspaper Award of 1954 for a moving series of articles on racial unrest and tribal revolt in Africa. In 1957 a series on Duplessis' Quebec regime earned him a Bowater award. The series was considered perhaps one of the finest pieces of investigative reporting in Canadian newspaper history.

In 1971 he won the top Mac-

Detention of shah denied

United Press International

Reports from Iran that the deposed shah is being "detained" by Panama pending extradition to Iran for trial, were denied today by aides to the exiled monarch as "totally unfounded and untrue."

Mark Morse, an aide to Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, said in interview from the Pacific Island resort of Contadora, where the exiled monarch is renting a villa, "I can flatly deny that rumor."

And in New York, shah aide Robert Armao said, "The report is totally unfounded and untrue. The situation in Panama is normal. Neither I nor the Panamanians know what they're (the Iranians) talking about."

He said the shah is relaxing on Contadora Island.

"There is no substance whatsoever to the story," a U.S. Embassy spokesman in Panama said. "It's been denied by the Panamanian government and I have spoken to some of the shah's people. There's been no official Panamanian government statement . . ."

In a telephone interview from New York, a spokesman for Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh in Tehran, said: "In accordance with Iran's request, the deposed shah is under detention by Panamanian authorities from this time forwards."

The shah has been living in exile in Panama since he left the United States in December. The Islamic militants holding 50 Americans at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran have demanded his return to face trial as a condition for the hostages' release.

"The Panamanian government is awaiting documentation and evidence to be sent by the Islamic Republic of Iran in order to proceed with the extradition of the shah," the spokesman, Ibrahim Moukalla, read from a ministry statement.

"The foreign minister said that he believes that the crisis will be resolved by peaceful means and by understanding," he said, adding "this action will calm the international political situation."

Hot words over Sakharov

Times News Services

In some of the sharpest language used between the super powers, the United States described the Soviet treatment of Nobel laureate Andrei Sakharov as an example of "official repression" that is the cause for the deepest concern.

The Soviet Union, meanwhile, called the dissident leader a "traitor" today and accused him of passing state secrets to diplomats in meetings at the U.S. Embassy.

Sakharov and his wife, Yelena, were moved from Moscow Tuesday to internal exile in the city of Gorky, where Westerners are not allowed.

The Sakharov case has emerged as a symbol — and a further cause — of the deepening freeze between Moscow and Washington that began with the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

In a statement issued late Tuesday, just before it was read to Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, the State Department said:

"All those who value freedom will deplore this official act of repression against a man who has struggled valiantly for human rights in the Soviet Union.

The statement used language that was unprecedented in identifying the Soviet leadership as the cause of the political repression in the Soviet Union.

U.S. officials said they believe the Sakharov episode was "an important step" in revealing the mood of the Soviet leadership and illustrating that the balance of power within the ruling Politburo has moved toward hard-line military and police officials.

The International League for Human Rights in New York said it has cabled Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev to express grave concern and demanded his immediate release.

Sakharov's stepson Alexey Semenov said in Newton, Mass., the arrest of the nuclear physicist resulted from an attempt to "clean Moscow" for the forthcoming Olympic Games and a shift in Soviet policy.

Meanwhile, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told the House of Commons in London that her government is considering a protest to Moscow.

Bennett shuts out media

The cool relationship between the press and Premier Bill Bennett got a touch chillier today.

The legislative press gallery was told by the premier's press secretary Hall Leiren that members of the media will be banned form the entire west annex of the legislature when the cabinet is in session.

That order means reporters will have no access to the offices of the premier and the ministry of inter-governmental relations as well as to the cabinet chamber for several hours each week.

Leiren said the cabinet made the decision after one gallery member was seen on the breezeway outside the second-floor cabinet room.

Extensive fog covered portions of the south coast this morning while some rain and drizzle fell over the north coast and northern Vancouver Island. Little precipitation occurred inland although skies were generally cloudy. A frontal system lying over the central coast is forecast to move slowly southward today and Thursday, bringing some rain or snow. Northern regions will gradually clear on Thursday as a strong high pressure area builds over the coast.

It takes fortitude to back the Tories

VANCOUVER — To be a Conservative in Canada takes a certain amount of patience. Also fortitude. Also hope. Also charity.

For anyone to persist in a party that makes almost a lifetime profession of being out of power requires a certain type of loyalty and perseverance.

It is why an air of bewilderment and honest confusion permeated the chandeliered ballroom of the stately Hotel Vancouver the other night as the faithful, patient Tories gathered in an attempt to manufacture some erzatz hoopla on behalf of Charles Joseph Clark, whose days as prime minister of this funny country seem to be ebbing away.

Good honest Tories, who waited uncomplaining for so long for their chance to run the country, expressed hurt and complete bafflement at the apparent truth dished up by the professional pollsters.

If what they read Tuesday is true, the election in fact is over and this rally was futile. How could it be?

An accomplice?

Tory after Tory accosted your innocent scribbler, demanding some justification for those frightening figures in the polls. The scribbler, being part of the communication process that delivers the sad figures, must somehow be an accomplice in the manufacture of those totals.

The thought that the young man up at the microphone, the only mini-messiah to appear since the Dief glory days, was about to be discarded by the voters after only nine months in the throne room — it absolutely shocked disbelieving souls.

Behind the shock, there showed through the conversation the constant thread of bitterness. "You mean after what Trudeau's been saying, he could be elected?" one distinguished gentleman demanded.

At the base of the bitterness are two recent Trudeau pronouncements that apply particularly to B.C. and can be well-judged here.

The first is the now-farcical pledge to "double-track" the 1,500 miles of CNR track from Winnipeg to Vancouver. The second is the Trudeau comment on the prospect of Alaska oil tankers loose among the fiords of the B.C. coast.

As to the first, it illustrates perfectly the casual contempt Trudeau displays — after 12 years — towards understanding anything about the forbidding West.

To talk about expanding the same railway tracks on the prairies that the CNR has been improving since 1974 is one piece of political chicanery. To talk about doubling the trackage through the narrow river canyon and steep-sided mountains of B.C. is so ludicrous (or insulting) as to defy description.

I like best the comment by Globe and Mail columnist Scott Young that the scheme was obviously devised by Dave Broadfoot of the Royal Canadian Air Farce. The thought of the Toronto Royal York minds of Jimmy Coutts and Senator Keith Davey pouring over a railway map with the philosopher-king is something only Broadfoot should be allowed to interprete.

The spectacle of Trudeau now blaming Joe Clark for the White House decision to ferry Alaska oil into a port just south of boat-loving Victoria makes one want to weep.

A short story here: 1968, Victoria-area voters elected as a Liberal one David Anderson, a bright and energetic law graduate who had worked overseas with external affairs.

A yachtsman and conservationist, Anderson grew frustrated at his Liberal government's failure to recognize the threat posed by the eventual shipment of Alaska oil south.

An independent type, he went to Washington on his own and appeared before Congressional committees, arguing passionately his cause. In his own way, at his own expense, he became a sort of Ralph Nader on the oil tanker issue and something of a folk hero in B.C.

His reward? The Liberal cabinet of P. Trudeau punished Anderson for his impertinence and cut him off from party assignments.

A caucus outcast

An outcast in his own caucus, Anderson gave up on Ottawa and retreated to B.C. for a futile term leading the provincial Liberal Party. He attempted to re-enter the Commons last May but is not running this time.

That was a decade ago when he attempted to wake up the Trudeau Liberals. The Ottawa lack of urgency in even considering the oil tanker threat on the West Coast was one of the reasons for the collapse of Liberal strength in B.C.

Trudeau's hypocritical attempt to shift the blame to Clark is so sleazy that it defies description.

That's why all those bewildered Tories in this ballroom were so bitter. They don't claim a political opponent should dish out charity. Just a bit of honesty, thank you.

Haida village prime site for UN honor

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Haida village with the largest standing collection of totem poles on the Pacific coast is a prime candidate for the first UN-designated world cultural site to honor a living North American Indian culture.

Abandoned before 1898, Ninstints Village on Anthony Island in the Queen Charlottes is "the only site of its kind left on the northwest coast, with magnificent Haida totem poles carved over 100 years ago, longhouses and a large number of plank houses in various stages of decay," says Peter Bennett.

"The village is really truly breathtaking, an absolutely magnificent setting," enthuses Bennett, special adviser to the assistant deputy minister of Parks Canada on the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

A committee composed of Bennett, a provincial parks representative and provincial museum staff members Allen Hoover and Richard Beauchamp, will complete a nomination proposal if the Skidgate band council approves.

"What we want is worldwide recognition for a very exciting living culture," Bennett said Tuesday.

The village's unique qualities were identified by Dr. George Macdonald, senior archeologist at the Museum of Man in Ottawa, who suggested Ninstints as a World Cultural Site.

"World Heritage listings cannot prevent indigenous people from using the area in the ways they have traditionally done: fishing, hunting and trapping can continue to everyone's hearts' content and if the Haidas don't want the public to go to the area, that will be done," said Bennett.

"Only a plaque on the beach need denote the World Cultural listing and although buildings and poles could be restored, a Disneyland atmosphere will never be allowed to occur."

The Islands Protection Society, environmentalists and Haidas trying to halt logging operations in the Charlottes and save the Southern Moresby Island as a wilderness area, back the UN listing as a first step to protection of the islands.

Saanich streamlining

The rulers of Victoria's biggest bedroom suburb this week juggled their procedures and jostled their higher paid lieutenants in an effort to improve their response time to the community.

The new format will be tried first on an experimental basis, but we are optimistic the changes will prove beneficial to the residents of Saanich who must deal directly with their elected officials.

Under the existing system, the aldermen and mayor convene twice a month for regular council meetings. They also meet up to six more times a month for various committee meetings and public hearings.

Under the new system which is expected to be underway in February, committee and council meetings will be held back to back on the same day, four times a month. Monday evenings have been set aside for the occasion.

Instead of an average of eight meetings a month on different evenings, council hopes handle the same workload in five — the four council/committee meetings plus one evening of public hearings.

You may believe Saanich councillors are dreaming to think the number of meetings can be cut by one third, but most aldermen and senior administrators feel the process of government will actually speed up by eliminating the four-week delay that often occurs when bouncing various items from committee to council. Anybody who deals with municipal hall on land or zoning matters will certainly hope this will be the case.

The new structure will also see the strengthening of the top civil servant's job. According to Mayor Mel Couvelier the senior administrator will be given more autonomy to run Saanich's day to day operations.

The position of deputy administrator will also be created by broadening the duties of the muncipal clerk rather than hiring a new person. These changes should help relieve council of much administrative trivia and give them the opportunity to deal more effectively with major issues.

The municipality's entire contingent of department heads will be expected to attend committee/council meetings. The intent is to avoid where possible the phenomenon of referring an item to one of these civil servants who now do not attend meetings. If an alderman's query can be answered at council meetings, there would be a time saving.

One potential flaw is that the present level of public involvement in decision making could be hampered. By eliminating some committee meetings, citizens will have fewer opportunities to address council. There is also the danger of the committee/council meeting turning into marathon sessions that carry on so far into the night that public participation is discouraged.

Council should ensure citizen discussion is not compromised. Sensible time limits should be placed on committee/council meetings and there should be no hesitation in calling an extra meeting or two if necessary.

The whole point of the exercise, as expressed by Alderman John Mika, is to give citizens a faster, more comprehensive response from council. If bureaucracy must persist, it might as well be efficient.

A new perspective

The Help End Inflation Association, a Victoria-based group that has become known for its creative and innovative views of economic problems, has tossed into the pot a new perspective on oil conservation.

The association supports the idea of mandatory rationing of gasoline rather than higher prices. Mandatory rationing, if imposed strictly, would lead to much greater conservation than any increase in price, the association suggests, and would also prevent the sharp increases in energy costs from adding to the costs of inflation.

But, the association warns, rationing will probably not be a popular idea among governments. It's not that they believe it would be politically damaging.

No, it's that more than 60 per cent of current gasoline costs is composed of taxes which go directly to the governments. A reduction of 20 to 25 per cent in gasoline consumption would have a serious effect on federal and provincial government finances.

With a new excise tax, the proportion of gasoline prices going to taxes will be even higher.

It's enough to make you wonder just how serious governments are when they talk about higher prices leading to significant conservation.

BARBARA McLINTOCK

The new finance minister?

The first Conservative television advertisements of the 1980 election campaign lament the death of the Liberal team. They cite a lengthy list of former Liberal cabinet ministers who have chosen not to run this time: John Turner, Don MacDonald, Barney Danson, Iona Campagnola, and so on. The message is that the much-disliked Pierre Trudeau is the only member of the old Liberal team left.

But a number of Liberals disagree. They say that many of the old players have gone into retirement, but a fresh, new team is springing up to replace them.

One of those Liberals is Donald Johnston, MP for the Montreal-area riding of St. Henri-Westmount. He is considered a key player for whatever new team is assembled, a candidate for the thankless job of finance minister if the Liberals are returned to power, even a possible successor to Trudeau as captain of the team.

Makes no sense

He considers absurd the suggestion that Trudeau is running as a one-man band in this election. "It just doesn't make sense. For ages the media and everyone were saying that the Liberal benches in Parliament were tired, were past their best, needed new blood. But now the old warhorses have gone and the new blood is there, everybody says Trudeau has nobody left."

He cites other names as members of the new team: some, like Art Phillips and Lloyd Axworthy, elected for the first time eight months ago; others, like North Vancouver's Gordon Gibson and Esquimalt-Saanich's Gerry Kristianson are trying to gain their first federal election this time round.

Johnston, a Montreal lawyer who first won election to the Commons in an October, 1978, byelection, does not like to speculate on his chances of taking on the finance portfolio. Yet, despite the portfolio's record as a graveyard of politicians' broken dreams, his eyes light up when the conversation turns to fiscal and monetary policy.

He believes his credibility is increased because he joined the Liberal caucus [illegible] recently; unlike some other challengers for the job, such as Herb Gray, he is not associated with Liberal mistakes of the past. And he makes no secret of the fact that he believes those mistakes were many, especially in the early 1970s.

During those economic good times, he says, the Liberals distorted the traditional Keynsian equation by spending like drunken sailors and increasing the federal deficit, rather than putting a surplus carefully aside for a rainy economic day. At the time the government "just threw money at problems," without demanding any accountability or evaluation of whether the programs worked, he says.

He thinks, however, that this attitude was changing in the last years of the Liberal reign. The rate of government spending increases was going down, and new evaluation and control systems were instituted.

Government spending is now quite

DONALD JOHNSTON
. . . new Liberal blood

well under control, he believes, although there are still areas that need improvement. He notes, for instance, that evaluations are now undertaken on nearly all direct-spending programs, but none [illegible] on the effectiveness of programs in which individuals and corporations are given tax-breaks in return for undertaking [illegible] programs such as job-creation projects.

The second half of the governmental budget equation is government revenues, and Johnston believes these are much less widely understood than spending. One of the greatest problems any federal government will have in moving towards a balanced budget, he says, is the erosion of the national tax base during the past eight years.

Few people realize, he says, that the basic tax base has been eroded by a sum now totalling about $16.5 billion per year through a series of tax-breaks, exemptions and alterations to policy in the essential federal taxes, such as income tax and capital gains tax. That erosion alone amounts to 1½ times the budgetary deficit of $11 billion.

Of the $16.5 billion, almost half ($7.5 billion) has come about through the indexing of income tax, a program undertaken in 1972 to ensure that people did not pay higher rates of income tax just because they received higher wages to cover living costs that had increased because of inflation.

"I think the biggest challenge in government finance will be to find ways to build up that tax base again" without hurting those who can least afford it or causing too much slowdown in the national economy, says Johnston.

Realize benefits

He is philosophically critical of the entire idea of indexing all sorts of government payments to take account of inflation. Since everyone's income is automatically made up by the amount of inflation, no one really has much reason to struggle to keep the inflation rate lower.

Johnston is obviously more interested in talking about national fiscal policy than about the political situation in Quebec. He grew up as a unilingual anglophone in Montreal, but believes that now anglophones across the country are realizing the benefits that come from bilingualism for their children. His own children attend a private French school in Montreal because, since the passage of the Quebec language law, it is difficult to find a place where they can be educated in French in the public school system.

He is quite confident that Rene Levesque's referendum on sovereignty-association will fail and that eventually Claude Ryan's suggestions for a new constitution will form the basis of discussion and [illegible] across the country.

"It is basically a federalist document," he says, and as such is acceptable as a starting point for talks.

His major hope for the moment is that he will be able to participate in those talks as a federal cabinet minister.

Rating explusion

Iranian officials have called for the expulsion of all members of the Western press. The Western media in response have naturally raised the question about the 'freedom' of the press. (The Iranians, we are told, have issued their injunction as a result of their belief that the reporting has not told the story from the Iranian point of view.)

Are we really to believe that each member of a newspaper or television network is not primarily concerned with presenting a point of view that is popular with its readership or viewers? The whole basis of the media in the West is to create interest, an effect that arouses a certain expectation in its audience. Clearly the major networks are committed — if they do not want their ratings to fall — to reflecting evidence that supports the overwhelming anti-Iranian point of view. And anyone who attempts to dispute this just does not know the psychology of the media, and the obsession with creating the most successful response from the viewers, measured in numbers and dollars.

Can you imagine it? NBC going into the alleged grievances against the Shah, actually exploring impartially the Iranian point of view. There would be a great outcry from the American people, charges of being cynically manipulated by the Iranian terrorists, and — finally — a likely boycott of the television network.

It is absurb to imply that the Iranians have expelled the U.S. and Western media because the Iranians just cannot stand to hear the "truth" spoken about them. No, the Iranian may be naive, but I believe they actually believed the American press would have given much more of the Iranian side of things. As it is they greatly overestimated the capacity — or indeed the inclination — of the Western press to really approach this drama with any kind of objectivity.—Robin W. Carlsen, 1225 Sunnyside Avenue.

Western Bricklin

The real issue is not whether Trident Aircraft should have received the promised federal loan, but should the federal government at that time have even considered it?

Not so many years, in an eastern province, there emerged a company that was to produce an automobile that the whole of Canada was waiting for — the Bricklin. What a farce. The provincial government and the Canadian people got burned on that one. Canada no more needed a Canadian copy of the American Corvette then, than it needs a copy of the American, Republic Sea-Bee airplane now.

I will agree that laying off workers is indeed a pity and if the present facilities can be used to manufacture aircraft parts, then I can only wish them the very best. It's a pity that so much time and money has already been lost. — James W. Brown, 306—157 Gorge Road East.

More for children

The International Year of the Child is not over. It must thrive in 1980. We got well into identifying the needs of children and their families, started looking at the gaps in services, and made some attempts to fill these gaps in 1979. But that's not enough. Those identified needs require measures to be put into effect on a long-term holistic basis.

Health and well-being are two of the most important aspects of a child's growth and development. Our future is our children and, if our future is to be healthy, we need to have healthy children now. The Association for the Care of Children in Hospitals (ACCH) seeks to foster and promote the health and well-being of children and families in health care settings through education, multidisciplinary interaction, planning and research. Elemental to all its undertakings is the belief that enlightened support of children and families in health care settings can spell the difference between developmental disturbance or dynamic growth. To encourage this growth, we hope to start a local Victora affiliate of ACCH. An exploratory meeting will be held on Wednesday, January 30, 1980, 7:30 p.m. in the Medical Lecture Theatre, Royal Jubilee Hospital. All those interested in helping children and families cope in health care settings are invited to attend, share ideas and help 1979 I.Y.C. extend into the 1980's.

We hope to see you there — whether you be parent, health care practitioner or student, or volunteer. — Heather F. Clarke, Chairman, IYC Health Committee for Capital Regional District.

Cause is here

Iran may be far away but the cause of the Iranian anger against the U.S. is also present here. It is the 'exploitation' of a country's resources without consideration of the people concerned. Most Canadians feel frustrated, if not angered at the domination of our economy by American interests, but we at least, are letting it happen because we are benefiting from this 'accentuated' exploitation of our natural wealth. However, this does not prevent us from venting our anger when a plant is closed by order of a distant corporate board of directors.

I am all too well aware that the colonialism of the past has now become a form of economic colonialism through aid funds and armies of experts. Our project leaders in Iran often commented that the Shah and the Empress were development conscious but were influenced by U.S. pressure to a pace of economic and military development that the people could not absorb. The U.S. is still viewing itself as fighting communism, and between that perception and its need to control oil resources, it has carelessly overlooked rising nationalism in Iran and so many other countries.

The same single-track mind views Canada as a source of raw materials and as the safety valve in which U.S. production can be increased or decreased in Canadian plants. Here in B.C. it is the logging industry especially where this is happening, and the policy of logging everything today and tomorrow be damned is well ensconced in our forest policy. The facts are well documented, but it is the recognition of the eventual harm and anger that this exploitation will create that has not yet surfaced.

The unions have benefited too much from this forest exploitation policy, and like the Shah, have found it hard to be too concerned. The small logging operators protested but found compensations, and even much of the public finds benefits from this temporary wealth. But Iran and many other areas of fomenting trouble in the world show the rise of 'people power' in the name of nationalism.

Iran is a pattern of things to come and the U.S. has made a grave miscalculation. Here, a more honest forest policy 'now', would help us remain more friendly toward the U.S. in the future and gain more respect in our stature abroad. — D.M. Trew, 37-1240 Newport Avenue.

Political vacuum

We are counselled in a democratic process that it is our duty to vote. I am not certain that this axiom will not do more harm than good in the present federal election. As it is the function of political leaders to provide reasonable and responsible alternatives to the electorate, it is also the function of the electorate to repudiate the unreasonable and the irresponsible.

There is a political vacuum in Canada — a need for a new party to represent those Canadians, in the majority I think, who cannot support either Clark or Trudeau or Broadbent for pretty obvious reasons. How can prospective leaders of such a new political force be encouraged to step forward and organize? By seeing that a very large number of voters withheld their ballots in protest against the three existing parties. If a political vacuum is perceived to exist it will be filled.

For a large number of Canadians not to vote would create a national scandal, — a plague [illegible] and are they not all deserving of that repudiation?

Clark has no leadership abilities and his policies are dangerous to Canadian unity. Trudeau mismanaged the economy and has extremist constitutional schemes. Broadbent practices dreamworld economics and his party will not support the Western Alliance.

I refuse to vote for the lesser of three evils. — L. J. Bailey, 202-1150 Rockland Avenue.

More than half

The author, E. B. White wrote, "Democracy is the recurrent suspicion that more than half the people are right more than half the time".

If we are to accept his statement, and if we accept the fact that the majority of our citizens do vote, then we have to assume that because the official opposition represented more than half the constituencies (people), then more than half the people of Canada are the ones who defeated the Conservative government.

To refuse to accept this equation is to defeat the whole concept of a representative parliament.

The Conservatives would do well then to stop criticizing the people of Canada for refusing their support and spend time telling the citizens why they should be supported. — Kim Pattison, 1572 Brodick Crescent.

Government policy encourages forest exploitation, says reader.

An 8,617-carat lesson for plungers

By MARTIN BARON
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — This is the story of how a big bank got stuck with a pile of diamonds.

It concerns the efforts of Security Pacific National Bank to unload a cache of 115,000 diamonds it obtained because of an embarrassing theft of its funds — efforts that ended with the sale of the gems to an American diamond merchant who lives in Israel and operates out of Liechtenstein.

The sale price was $6.5 million — or was it closer to $6 million? That was considerably less than the $8 million or so the stones were really worth — or were they?

The confusing episode shows how even the most knowledgeable experts can sometimes look naive in the treacherous world of international diamond trading.

Moreover, it stands as an object lesson to those investors so inclined to pour their money into anything that shines these days that they forget that those things, too, can go down in price.

The global diamond community, a relatively small and exclusive club, has all kinds of advice on how Los Angeles-based Security Pacific could have obtained more for the gems. After all, in today's dollars, the bank got 26 per cent less for the stones than did the Soviet company that sold them almost a year before. It also got 23 per cent less than its own appraiser said the diamonds were worth.

For its part, the bank would rather forget the entire matter at this point. Insurance will cover anything over $1 million in losses, and it still may recover some funds through suits it has filed. However, details about Security Pacific's sojourn into diamond trading emerge clearly in internal bank documents that soon will be entered in the court record of a Security Pacific lawsuit.

How the bank came to possess the diamonds has been well publicized. On Oct. 25, 1978, computer analyst Stanley Mark Rifkin, who had been hired to install an automatic funds transfer system, learned the bank's secret funds transfer code of the day and sent $10.2 million to a New York bank. The money, from what is believed to be the largest bank theft in history, was then transferred to a Swiss bank. In Zurich, a Los Angeles diamond dealer hired by Rifkin paid $8.1 million for a collection of diamonds from Russalmaz, a Soviet diamond firm.

Rifkin brought the diamonds back into the United States in a suitcase. Customs officers who searched his bags didn't spot the cargo. Tipped by then to the wire theft and to Rifkin's efforts to resell the diamonds, the FBI arrested the computer analyst on Nov. 6. About $2 million that had not been used for the diamond purchase was returned to Security Pacific.

But the bank was stuck with 8,617 carats of diamonds.

Security Pafific held a sealed-bid auction last Sept. 18, which was unsuccessful. The bank failed to receive its requested minimum bid off $7.5 million.

A private auction was held two days later, and the bank said only that it accepted a bid of $6.5 million.

Interbank agreements, telex correspondence, and a promissory note from the ultimate buyer now reveal what the bank did not say:

According to terms of the deal, Security Pacific would not get its $6.5 million for another 18 months. There would be no down payment. There would be an annual interest rate of only 5 per cent, with quarterly interest payments of $81,250.

Credit terms like those make the sale price substantially less than $6.5 million in dollars after adjusting for anticipated inflation and certain other factors, the bank's own calculation showed.

"My reaction is, so what?" said Walter S. Fisher, Security Pacific's senior vice president who handled the sale.

Under the present-value calculation, the bank would realize the equivalent of only $6 million on the sale.

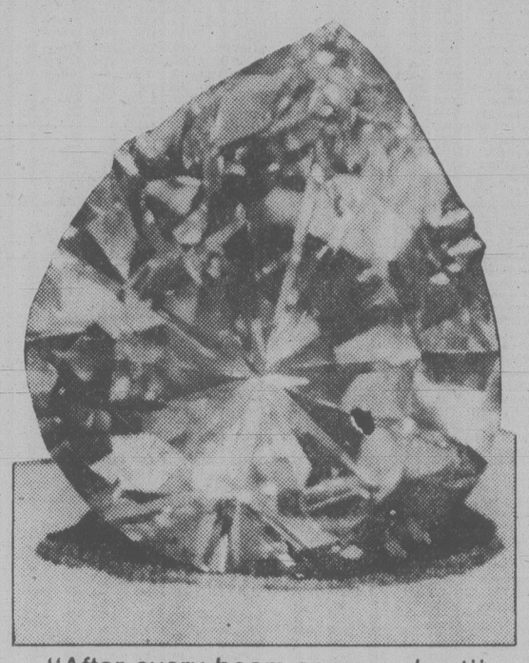
"I don't consider (the terms) generous," Fisher contended. "I consider the deal was fairly struck. We got as much as we could expect to get under the circumstances at the time."

In his role as the bank's general auditor, Fisher worked with the FBI from the beginning to solve the diamond case. When the stones were seized from Rifkin — who is serving an eight-year prison sentence — Fisher inherited the unfamiliar task of selling them. And while Fisher, 47, has spent nearly three decades in banking, he certainly lays no claim to expertise in diamonds.

Banks, after all, don't often sell precious gems, despite their expertise in most types of financial transactions. Occasionally, after foreclosure proceedings, they must sell houses, stocks or bonds. But diamonds are different. There is no ready market, no universal price list exists, and the business is dominated by very sophisticated merchants.

The bank hired a Pasadena, Calif.-based jewelry firm, B.D. Howes and Son, to appraise the diamonds and help conduct the sale. No one expected a flood of prospective buyers, but most thought the sale would draw at least a few.

Instead, the bank got just one bid — for $5.6 million, almost $2 million less than the minimum it had established.



"After every boom comes a bust"

"After every boom comes a bust, and we're in a bust at the moment," said Asher Schonkopf, leading principal of the diamond trading firm that ultimately bought the stones. After being contacted by the Los Angeles Times, Schonkopf acknowledged that he bought the stones.

Schonkopf, an American national living in Tel Aviv — whom the bank even now will not confirm as the buyer — said he and "a few" partners run a diamond organization employing 250. One of his firms, G.S.G. Investment A.G., incorporated in Liechtenstein, bought the Security Pacific diamonds and already has resold some of them.

Big though it was, the deal was not as big as the bank and its own diamond adviser originally thought it would be. After a half-dozen experts examined the stones for about three weeks, the bank's chosen diamond dealer seemed fairly optimistic about a successful sale.

In a letter dated last April 24, Durward Howes III, president of the Howes jewelry firm, wrote Fisher that the entire lot had a "cash-out value" of about $7.75 million. Howes added that "the amount the bank will receive for these diamonds might be as much as 20 per cent more than this figure and possibly as little as 10 per cent less than this figure."

In his most prescient statement, however, he noted: "Their actual cash (value) will only be decided 'once the bids are in.'" Howes advised selling the diamonds in one group, requiring a 10 per cent down payment and a minimum bid of $7.79 million. The bank ultimately decided on a $7.5-million minimum bid.

By July 3, however, Howes sent another letter to Fisher: "I felt it best to bring you up to date on what's happening in the diamond market," Howes wrote. He mentioned several "problems."

Howes said the DeBeers diamond syndicate, a near monopoly that sells 80 per cent of the world's supply of rough gem diamonds, recently had sold lots of poorer quality rough stones at its last three or four sales in London, thus weakening the over-all market for lower-grade stones such as those held by Security Pacific.

Howes also told Fisher about a severe price slide in the market for melee diamonds — those with a weight of one-fourth carat or less. Five-eighths of Security Pacific's diamonds, by carat weight, were melee. The rest were bigger commercial stones. None was of the top-quality "investment" type.

Several diamond experts contacted by the Times disputed details of Howe's market analysis. Others think Howes' original appraisal was unrealistically high.

Security Pacific and several diamond experts also think Rifkin overpaid the Russians for the stones, even though the bank's appraised value six months later came very close to Rifkin's purchase price.

One thing is clear: The Russians did not want to buy back the diamonds for the price at which they sold them. Shortly after Security Pacific took possession of the diamonds, Howes called the Russians about taking them back. "They said they never take something back . . .," Howes recalled. "It was 'no,' cut and dry."

Now that the diamonds have been sold, Fisher and Howes express no regrets about their sales strategy. "I'm absolutely 100 per cent convinced we did the right thing," Fisher said.

But is buyer Schonkopf rejoicing over a bargain-basement buy?

"It was no great buy," he said. "Other people saw the goods beforehand. Some of them, I tried to sell the diamonds to. They estimated (the value) much below what we paid for them."

And the market now for such lower quality stones? "It's getting cheaper every month," Schonkopf said.

Topography of smoking

NEW YORK — The popularity of low-nicotine cigarettes raises new questions about smoking behavior.

Investigators now want to know about the "topography" of smoking: How hard does each smoker puff on a cigarette? How long does he hold the smoke in his mouth or lungs? How do the nicotine and other components influence his brain chemistry? The fundamental nature of these questions indicates how little is known about the behavior of smoking.

Although tobacco research findings are highly controversial, a few provocative studies indicate that there may be receptor sites in the brain that mediate nicotine addiction, and that switching to a low-nicotine cigarette may induce smokers to regulate their internal level of nicotine by smoking more cigarettes or smoking them harder.

Low in nicotine, but . . .

If it is true that those who switch smoke more cigarettes or draw on them harder and hold the smoke in longer to maintain a desired level of nicotine in their blood, they may be raising their intake of carbon monoxide, hydrogen cyanide and nitrogen oxides — gases implicated in cardiovascular disease, respiratory problems and fetal damage.

Nicotine use produces no overt high, and its precise attraction to the smoker is unknown.

"Smoking does not improve the mood or calm the smoker," says one researcher, "nor does it improve his performance compared with the nonsmoker. However, not smoking or insufficient nicotine makes the performance of the smoker considerably worse on all dimensions."

Dr. Avram Goldstein, director of the Addiction Research Foundation in Palo Alto, Calif., is trying to locate specific receptor sites in the brain that are responsible for nicotine addiction.

Matter of body chemistry?

He thinks that people who cannot quit smoking may be chemically unique.

Related work at the Medical College of Virginia may explain why the brain should contain receptors for nicotine, which is not produced by the body. According to John Rosecrans, professor of pharmacology, nicotine receptors are probably the same sites where two of the nervous system's chemical messengers — dopamine and acetylcholine — are normally bound.

Even as he pursues the pharmacology of the drug state, however, Rosecrans notes that nicotine alone cannot explain cigarette dependence.

Even when nicotine withdrawal is highly uncomfortable, he said, the body's craving ends within four to seven days. After that, a smoker who starts again is responding to psychological need.

Iran situation turning point in America's long retreat?

By RICHARD J. WHALEN

(Excerpted from The Washington Post, this article was written by Richard Whalen, who is co-author with Ben J. Wattenberg of a forthcoming book on foreign policy, The Wealth Weapon.)

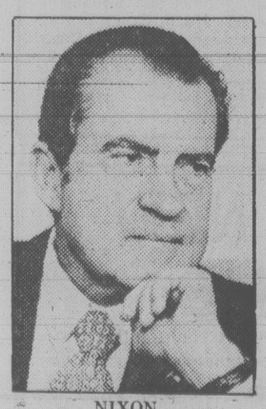
WASHINGTON — Between the Tet offensive in Vietnam and the siege of the U.S. embassy in Tehran, America has been in confused retreat. The root causes of our mounting troubles abroad are to be found not in remote Iran or Soviet occupied Afghanistan, but here at home.

The American retreat from world leadership and respect began inside the heads of influential and articulate citizens who drew and taught, especially through the news media, the wrong lessons from the past decade of U.S. defeat.

Before we can reverse this downtrend, we must identify and begin to correct at least some of these false ideas. If we do not, the American retreat will continue until the global primacy of the Soviet Union becomes certain in the 1980s and beyond.

What's gone wrong? Here are several trends to be reversed:

□ The ascendancy of Congress — Seen in historical and strategic perspective, Watergate was the climax of the domestic political civil war fought to determine who would explain America's defeat in Vietnam and who would be blamed for it. Congress won this conflict and imposed punitive ex post facto restrictions on the office of the presidency in the conduct of foreign policy.



NIXON
. . . war scapegoat

In fact, the United States lost in Vietnam because the war was fought for incoherent political reasons and under extreme tactical constraints ("graduated response") that made it militarily unwinnable.

In the end the antiwar liberals succeeded in turning the partisan tables and made Richard Nixon the scapegoat for Lyndon Johnson's and Robert McNamara's war.

The simplistic slogan "No More Vietnams" became the justification for a wide array of misguided "reforms" giving Congress far-reaching authority over foreign policy, intelligence-gathering, covert activities, use of U.S. armed force overseas and military and technical aid to allies.

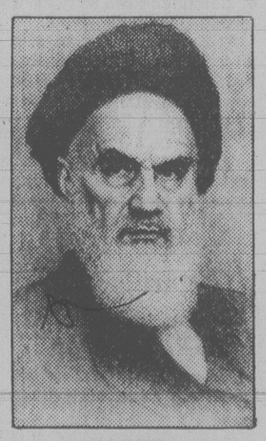
As a result, U.S. foreign policy is now dictated by Congress, an inherently parochial and increasingly undisciplined and anarchic body.

The remedy: A strong, purposeful president, prepared to take his arguments for the national interest over the heads of Congress directly and persuasively to the people.

□ Runaway public-sector growth — Since the Great Society was launched more than a decade ago, we have created the opportunity for congressional government to practise cash-and-carry democracy consisting of the lavish care and feeding of fiscal constituencies. We have thus established an absolute domestic policy priority, making it extremely difficult to divert resources to meet urgent foreign-policy and defence needs.

Over-all, public-sector spending claims one-third of the gross national product. Domestic programs calculated to bribe various groups of voters with their own taxes have grown relentlessly, while real defence spending has shrunk to pre-World War II levels as a percentage of GNP.

The remedy: "Re-order priorities" and give a closely supervised Pentagon the resources needed to rebuild the strength and credibility of U.S. military power.



KHOMEINI
. . . comic-book villain

□ Economic and monetary isolationism — We have kept our economy expanding and paid skyrocketing OPEC oil prices by printing more and more dollars. One of the unforeseen effects has been to undermine our world economic leadership and drive the United States toward isolationist policies, such as possible foreign-exchange controls.

Foreigners holding hundreds of billions of dollars have demanded that the United States accept the discipline of defending our currency against collapse through high domestic interest rates, despite the recessionary impact on the U.S. economy.

But the austerity policy of "the dollar first, America second" lacks congressional and popular support, as the anticipated recession and the next dollar crisis will reveal.

The remedy: Before Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker is forced to stand alone, restoration of the dollar's international standing and America's influence should be given the top priority it deserves.

□ Self-deceit on U.S.-Soviet relations — Since the mid-1960s a formidable bipartisan consensus has formed in political, intellectual and media circles: The Cold War is "over," the Soviets need and want arms-control agreements ("peace") as badly as we do and, therefore, Soviet intentions should be optimistically construed. The corollary, of course, was that the Soviets, regardless of what they or their clients and proxies said or did, sincerely wanted "detente" and improved relations, concretely expressed in the sale of American grain and technology on favorable terms.

From Cuba to Angola to Afghanistan, the United States has learned the habit of self-restraint in all circumstances so as not to jeopardize ongoing SALT negotiations, upset detente and the assumed Pax Atomica and call into question our politically comfortable embrace of expanding welfarism at the expense of the defence budget.

The siege of the U.S. embassy in Tehran marks a potentially climactic turning point in the long American retreat. The Ayatollah Khomeini, a villain straight out of the pages of World War II-vintage comic books, has broken the spell of complacency and fired the mass imagination — at least temporarily.

Bonds

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were higher in active trading on the Canadian bond market Tuesday as the price of gold declined sharply.

The short end of the market rose 15 cents. Mid-, long-term, and provincial issues were up about three-quarters of a point. Corporates gained one-half point.

Day-to-day money was available at 14 per cent.

The strengthening in the Canadian bond market was reinforced by the consumer price index, which was up 0.6 per cent in December against 0.1 per cent in November, an analyst at McLeod Young Weir Ltd said.

Dealers said the market appeared nervous with the Government of Canada issue overhanging the market.

$ Exchange

IN VICTORIA today purchase of U.S. funds in terms of Canadian dollars is 1.1545 for cash, 1.1550 for cheques and 1.1145 for coins. Selling rates are 1.1650 for cash and 1.1665 for cheques.

IN MONTREAL, the U.S. dollar in terms of Canadian funds at noon was down 2/25 at $1.1604. Pound sterling was up 11/100 at $2.6434.

IN NEW YORK, the Canadian dollar was up 3/50 at $0.8618 and pound sterling was up 1/4 at $2.2780.

Crown Zellerbach

Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. has reported record sales and earnings for 1979, the result of continued strong demand for the company's major commodities in export markets.

Sales rose to $614.3 million compared with $507.5 million in 1978, Chairman R. G. Rogers said in a news release. Net earnings climbed to $52.1 million or $6.32 per share compared with $36.3 million or $4.43 in the previous year.

Rogers said the increase was due to vigorous demand for newsprint, a resurging pulp market, a strong first-half lumber market and benefits derived from the exchange premium on the United States dollar.

Texasgulf

Texasgulf Inc. had net earnings of $136.8 million or $4.05 a share in 1979, compared with $50.1 million or $1.33 the previous year, the company announced.

It attributed $12.4 million or 40 cents a share to capitalizing interest in an accounting change.

Sales last year totalled $789.2 million up from $602.2 million in 1978, because of higher prices for all products.

Company chairman Charles F. Fogarty said the outlook for this year is even better.

Canada Packers

Canada Packers Inc. had net earnings of $21.398 million or $3.57 a share in the 39 weeks ended Dec. 29, compared with $12.638 million or $2.11 in the similar period a year ago.

The company's interim report notes that comparison with a year ago is not meaningful since a major part of the company's Canadian operations was shut down for seven weeks by a strike.

Company reports

Ronyx

Ronyx Corp. Ltd. had net earnings of $959,000 for the year ended Sept. 30, despite a loss of $1.115 million in its real estate holdings, the company's annual report shows.

The profit came on earnings of $2.074 million from its manufacturing division, Fleet Industries.

In the previous fiscal year, Ronyx had earnings of $445,000, with a profit of $886,000 in manufacturing and a $441,000 loss in real estate.

N.B. Cook

N. B. Cook Corp. has announced earnings for the six-month period ending Nov. 30 of $4,341,709 or $1.45 a share.

Total assets grew during the same period by 35 per cent to $110 million president N. B. Cook, said in a news release.

Cessna

Cessna Aircraft Co. has reported higher sales but lower earnings for the first quarter of fiscal 1980.

Earnings for the first quarter were $8.3 million (U.S.) or 45 cents a share from $10.8 million, or 58 cents a share, a year ago. The drop in earnings was attributed to employee turnover, parts shortages and high material costs.

Consolidated sales were $245 million, up from $198 million a year earlier for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1979.

Cessna directors declared at a meeting that the regular quarter dividend of 20 cents a share, payable Feb. 12 to shareholders of record on Jan. 29.

Tele-Capital

Tele-Capital Ltd., operator of several radio and television stations in Quebec, has reported its net earnings for the first quarter ended Nov. 30 were $2.127 million or 96 cents a share, compared with $2.134 million or 98 cents a share for the same period a year earlier.

Revenues increased by 14.2 per cent to $9.366 million from $8.203 million but the company said operating expenses also rose because of federal regulations requiring more local programs.

Hudson's Bay Company

ISSUE OF
$1,600,000,000
NON-CALLABLE
GOVERNMENT OF CANADA BONDS
DATED FEBRUARY 1, 1980

The Bank of Canada is authorized by the Minister of Finance to receive subscriptions for a loan to be issued for cash as follows:

2 year 10½ month 11¾% bonds due December 15, 1982
Issue price: 98.75% yielding about 12.27% to maturity
Interest payable June 15 and December 15
Four and one-half months' interest payable June 15, 1980

and

4 year 10½ month 11½% bonds due December 15, 1984
Issue price: 98.50% yielding about 11.91% to maturity
Interest payable June 15 and December 15
Four and one-half months' interest payable June 15, 1980

and

9 year 10½ month 11¼% bonds due December 15, 1989
Issue price: 96.50% yielding about 11.86% to maturity
Interest payable June 15 and December 15
Four and one-half months' interest payable June 15, 1980

and

23 year 11¾% bonds due February 1, 2003
Issue price: 97.50% yielding about 12.07% to maturity
Interest payable August 1 and February 1.

The new bonds will be available in denominations of $1,000, $5,000, $25,000, $100,000 and $1,000,000.

The 11¾% bonds dated February 1, 1980 and due February 1, 2003 will be issued in a maximum amount of $600 million.

The Bank of Canada has agreed to acquire a minimum of $650 million of the new bonds. This acquisition will be open as to maturity except that the total will include a minimum of $215 million of the 2003 maturity.

Proceeds of the offering will be used to redeem $944 million of Government of Canada bonds maturing on February 1, 1980 and for general purposes of the Government of Canada.

The new 11¾% bonds due December 15, 1982 are in addition to $275 million of 11¾% bonds due December 15, 1982 and dated December 15, 1979. The new 11½% bonds due December 15, 1984 are in addition to $350 million of 11½% bonds due December 15, 1984 and dated December 15, 1979. The new 11¼% bonds due December 15, 1989 are in addition to $125 million of 11¼% bonds due December 15, 1989 and dated December 15, 1979.

The new bonds will be dated February 1, 1980 and will bear interest from that date. Principal and interest when due are payable in lawful money of Canada. Principal is payable on maturity at any agency of the Bank of Canada. Interest is payable without charge at any branch in Canada of any bank. Definitive bonds will be available on or about February 1, 1980 and thereafter in two forms: bearer form with coupons attached and fully registered form with interest payable by cheque. Bonds of both forms will be in the same denominations and fully interchangeable as to denomination and/or form without charge (subject to statutory transfer requirements where applicable).

The new bonds are authorized pursuant to an Act of the Parliament of Canada and both principal and interest are a charge on the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada.

Applications for the new bonds may be made, subject to allotment, through any investment dealer eligible to act as a primary distributor or through any bank in Canada.

Learn or leave, coroners told

VANCOUVER (CP) — Coroners who aren't interested in upgrading their expertise at training sessions in Vancouver should consider retiring, Dr. William McArthur, British Columbia's chief coroner, said Tuesday.

McArthur said that coroners who may be resigning rather than attend a training seminar Jan. 31 are a small group of mavericks reticent about joining in with the rest of the group.

Chilliwack coroner Dr. Doug Colledge resigned in mid-December rather than attend the three-day session, claiming it would cost him about $1,500 in lost revenue as general practitioner.

Colledge said that at least five other coroners also resigned at about the same time because they felt attendance at the training seminar was compulsory.

However, McArthur said Colledge's resignation was the only one he had received in connection with attendance at the seminars.

"I'm not trying to be a martinet and to regiment them, my philosophy is the reverse," he said. "I'm adamant that we foster community coroners and not make it into a civil service function."

McArthur cited the case of a coroner appointed in B.C. in 1978 who has never claimed for his services "because he didn't realize coroners were paid" as an example of the kind of thing it was hoped the seminars would eradicate.

A survey taken by the coroners' service showed the majority of the province's 140 laymen coroners wanted training sessions, he said.

The seminars will deal with the new Coroners' Act and other topics related to inquests and coroners' duties, McArthur said.

Meanwhile, McArthur said the coroners' 1979-80 budget was $1.05 million, one third less than in the previous fiscal year.

He said the reason for the budget cut was never explained to him.

"Most people would agree that the service was minimal before so if you cut a minimal service by a third, you haven't a hope in hell of making it through that year," McArthur said.

He said he warned the attorney-general's department in June, 1979 that the coroner's service would run out of funds — which did occur Nov. 20 of the same year.

Gordon Hogg, director of financial services in the attorney-general's department, said the lower budget for this fiscal year was "a funding level granted by the treasury board."

Hogg said a $750,000 warrant has been issued by order-in-council to cover the 1979-80 coroner's service budget until March 31, 1980.

'Tricks' probe still probing

Exactly three months have passed since RCMP Inspector Les Holmes of Vancouver was officially put in charge of an investigation into phoney letters to the editor and other alleged Socred dirty tricks.

But Holmes said today he has nothing to report. The investigation is continuing, he said.

Holmes gave no indication of what his inquiry had turned up or when a report can be expected.

Attorney-General Allan Williams said Tuesday he is in the dark.

"There have been no indications to me at all," he said.

"When this was first started the RCMP indicated they thought the investigation would be concluded by Dec. 15. Subsequently they said it was continuing.

The minister said when the RCMP finally finish the work, they will take the findings to Crown counsel.

Broad Street mall revived

A seven-year-old plan to turn one block of Broad Street into a mall has been revived by haberdasher R.G. Couvelier.

In a letter to city council's public works committee Couvelier said the Victoria Downtown Business Association has asked him to "investigate the prospect of developing more thoroughly the pedestrian potential of Broad Street in downtown Victoria."

Property owners in the block between Broughton and Fort where Couvelier's clothing store is located, were queried last fall about the matter.

Couvelier said they were receptive to the mall design drafted by the city in the early 1970s. A sketch of the plan shows widened sidewalks and an extra crosswalk in mid-block, although traffic would still have access. There would be five parking stalls in the block and about a dozen benches and planters.

The matter comes up for discussion Thursday on the agenda of Ald. Robin Blencoe's works committee.

PEO Sisters to celebrate

Victoria members of the PEO Sisterhood will mark the 111th anniversary of Founders' Day Saturday with a coffee party at Emmanuel Baptist Chuch, 2121 Cedar Hill Cross Road.

Guests will be received by Mrs. Eileen Aubel, president of the Victoria Presidents' Council. They will include provincial president Mrs. Edna Morse of Vancouver and board members, two of whom are Mrs. Judy Kinnear and Mrs. Gerry Porter of Victoria.

The PEO Sisterhood was founded on the campus of Wesleyan College in 1869 and the first Canadian chapter was formed in Vancouver in 1911.

It is a philanthropic educational organization primarily interested in higher education for women.

It offers international peace scholarships to foreign students for post graduate work in Canadian or American universities, an educational loan fund for undergraduates and a continuing education program for women whose education was interrupted or needs upgrading.

WCB debts to taxpayers?

The burden of the Workers' Compensation Board's unfunded deficit — $227 million in 1978 and feared to be higher for 1979 — should be placed on taxpayers rather than employers as it is now, says the B.C. Construction Association.

The association also wants a new cost-sharing scheme under which board services would be paid for by government and employees as well as employers.

The proposal, in a brief presented to the provincial cabinet Tuesday, was immediately endorsed by the Council of Forest Industries of B.C. and blasted by the International Woodworkers of America.

The association, which represents 2,100 companies employing more than 90,000 workers, said it expects that employer assessments will be raised to pay off the debt and that this will increase production costs and be reflected in the price of finished products.

"When this inflated cost structure applies to export industries through higher building costs, the B.C. industries in the international market will be greatly hampered," the association's brief said.

"To avoid the added inflationary pressure in our cost structure, we urge that funds be made available from general revenue by the government of B.C. to the WCB to eliminate the deficit accumulated in the past."

Paul Crawford, senior vice-president and controller for the Council of Forest Industries, said the board's deficit is of great concern to his industry, whose share of the liability is more than $70 million.

Crawford said the council is about to make a proposal similar to the association's because, despite an amortization scheme introduced two years ago to reduce the deficit gradually, it rose to $227 million in 1978 from $189 million the year before, and it is expected to go higher because costs have been rising faster than assessments.

"I sure as hell am opposed to it," said Jack Munro, Western Regional IWA president, head of B.C.'s largest union which has had sharp public differences with the board in recent months.

"Workers' compensation payments from the WCB come from the cost of doing production and the people doing the production should pay the assessment required," Munro said.

The Employers Council of B.C. was qualified in its support for the association's plan.

The council presented a brief in August, 1978, to then-labor minister Allan Williams asking the provincial government to split the cost with employers of paying off a $50 million portion of the deficit which resulted from changes to the compensation board act in 1965, 1972 and 1974 affecting benefits payable to people who were already receiving compensation.

Council president Bill Hamilton said Tuesday that much of the accumulated deficit "represents inflationary forces beyond the control of any government; costly though it is, industry has to accept a responsibility along with everybody else in that situation."

But he said that where government has legislated additional costs into funding, it has a responsibility to bear a portion of those costs.

Hamilton said the association's proposed cost-sharing scheme "would be quite acceptable to us" but he was not prepared to endorse it.

Former Times columnist Scott dies at 64

Millan Bloedel prize for an eight-part series in the Times titled: "Victoria — A Search for Identity."

At one stage, he worked for the Toronto Star and in 1964, at the age of 49, he was appointed the paper's Latin American correspondent, based in Rio de Janeiro.

Among the stories he covered during his career were the Torrey Canyon oil spill off Land's End, the Aberfan disaster when Welsh children were buried under a slag heap, the Six Day War in Israel, the military overthrow of half a dozen elected South American governments, the Cuban revolution, the apartheid situation in South Africa and an early look at separatism in eastern Canada.

Those who knew Scott say he was a shy, reserved man.

He enjoyed playing golf and shot in the 80s when he was in his prime. Earlier in his life, he was a keen fisherman spending time on the water around his Salt Spring home near Vesuvius Bay.

He also had a reputation as an ardent, shrewd poker player.

"I think what really distinguished him as a columnist was his terrific change of pace," says Times Page Five editor Peter Murray, who came to know Scott better than most people at the paper.

"Jack could be political, angry, philosophical, humorous — a different style all the time."

Another distinguishing feature was that Scott never attacked people, says Murray.

"He was tough on issues but never personally abusive. Basically a very gentle man.

"He liked people.

"He didn't like savaging people like many columnists nowadays do. The trend now is to attack personalities rather than issues."

Jack Webster, former radio hotline host now with B.C. Television, was a good friend of Scott's and a neighbor of his on Salt Spring.

"Canada has lost one of the best newspapermen, columnists and essayists of the century," he said in an interview today.

Webster worked with him for a number of years on the Sun and described Scott as a member of that great coterie of old-time newspapermen.

"He was colorful, flamboyant and had a touch of humanity.

"There isn't a newspaperman in the country with his kind of concern for people.

"He was a left-wing humanist."

Berton, today described Scott as "the most elegant newspaper writer in Canada."

"He had a style that flowed so easily," said Berton, adding that Scott had been a close friend since their days together on the News Herald in the 1940s.

"He sweated over every word but he knew words and loved words. He was one of the most popular columnists that ever hit the west coast."

Cromie, interviewed today at his Vancouver home, described Scott as "a delightful person."

"He was one of the great writers this city has seen," he added.

"Jack was a shy person," Cromie recalls, remembering one incident when Scott was to receive a civil liberties award at the University of B.C.

Scott came into the publisher's office concerned about having to give a speech at the presentation.

A bottle of whisky was brought out "to shore up Jack so that he could give his little speech."

"Well, Jack drank his way right through lunch and never did get out of there."

Cromie said time didn't mean too much to Scott and sometimes, even on assignment he would vanish and send back the most incredible notes saying he "fell in with thieves in northern Ontario or something."

"I would say that Jack was so much of an individualist that he is difficult to compare with anybody else," Cromie said.

Himie Koshevoy, who was Scott's city editor at the Sun for a time, said he was a "great guy, a great feature writer."

"He had the ability to find stories almost everywhere.

"He could write seriously and bring tears to your eyes or make you laugh.

"He had a great way with words."

Scott is survived by his wife of 41 years, Grace; three married daughters, Judy, who lives with her husband in South Africa; Jill (Fowles) of Victoria; and Jenny (Walsh), who lives on Salt Spring. There are four grandchildren.

The funeral service was a private, family affair held Tuesday at Scott's home.

Carter considers draft

first time since the draft ended in 1973. But defence department officials said Tuesday that the Pentagon has sent no staff papers recommending a renewal of registration to the White House.

However, senior military officers, particularly army generals, have said peacetime registration is necessary to ensure enough military manpower to fill out regular forces in an emergency.

In his State of the Union address today, Carter is expected to disclose a long-range plan for containing the Soviet Union in Southwest Asia following its military move into Afghanistan.

In the address to Congress, Carter will outline a new doctrine for the area which is likely to stress a buildup of U.S. military strength and appeal to countries in the region to resist any further Soviet moves there.

The Tass news agency said Tuesday that U.S. President Jimmy Carter's statement Monday on the need to keep the U.S. the strongest nation in the world "sets up an overt U.S. claim to world domination."

In a dispatch from Washington, Tass said the president was proclaiming "a course towards confrontation and renunciation of the achievements of detente and putting forward a conception of reliance on U.S. military might and strength."

The report also said the Carter statement shows that the United States intends "to carry on the policy of military and economic blackmail with regard to Iran" by saying that the Soviet Union represents a threat to Iran.

In related developments:

— President Carter's call for a boycott of the summer Olympic Games in Moscow, condemned by European Olympic committees, is picking up support from foreign governments and political parties.

Britain, China, Australia and New Zealand gave their conditional backing Tuesday to Carter's proposal for the boycott unless Soviet troops withdraw from Afghanistan by Feb. 20.

But France formally accepted Tuesday the invitation to participate in the games.

— a Soviet shipping official charged today that U.S. Air Force planes have begun "provocative" buzzing of Soviet merchant ships, flying as close as 25 yards to some vessels, the Tass news agency reported.

Tracy works on waitress Janie Scott, a pack-a-day smoker

She'll help you boot that awful habit

By PAT DUFOUR

An "evangelist" swept into Victoria this week spreading the gospel on National Non-Smoking Week which is in full swing.

She's Marie Tracy, "smoking cessation consultant" with the provincial health ministry's Action B.C.

"I lost a brother through lung cancer and I became an evangelist," says Tracy who is a bundle of nicotine-free energy.

Not that she's much different from millions who have tried to kick the habit.

It took her "six years and about 2,000 tries" before she finally made it.

She went to train as a group leader in New York with Smokewatchers, a commercial company that was "very unsuccessful because people won't pay to stop smoking."

But for Tracy there was no turning back. Her war on tobacco was on.

She received more than 1,500 letters when she appeared on CBC's Hourglass in 1973, and in 1975 she developed the program Operation Kick It for the B.C. Lung Association.

In a whirlwind visit to Victoria on Tuesday she came armed with two other programs she's also developed. One is A Do-It Yourself Quit Smoking Course. It's available for 50 cents and can be obtained by writing Action B.C., 1600 West 6th Avenue, Vancouver, V6J 1R3.

The other program BUTT OUT! is free and comes with a training manual. It is aimed at senior secondary school students.

"It's no good working on junior secondary students when it's their big brothers and sisters that are smoking," Tracy says.

The program is being run in eight Vancouver schools and Tracy explained the program to school authorities here during her visit.

She also visited Victoria General Hospital, Royal Jubilee Hospital and Saanich Peninsula Hospital to talk to staff.

Tracy says there are three stages in her programs for quitting smoking.

The first helps smokers "get psyched up for quitting." She suggests a 21-day period in which to prepare and gradually cut down.

Then comes the time to quit and deal with the "very definite withdrawal that people suffer."

Finally comes the stage where the would-be non-smokers "learn to adjust their thinking to be able to live in a society that's full of cigarettes," Tracy says.

At this stage people learn how to deal with weight problems, find other ways to use their time and energy and are introduced to new lifestyle concepts, such as practising good nutrition.

"We're trying to help people get healthy and teach them to maintain that health."

Slashed pay proposed for development work

By AL FORREST

Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce today unveiled a plan to cut salaries for the region's industrial development commissioner by $20,000, freeing extra money for external promotion.

The chamber is offering to run the commissioner's office on a contract basis and has submitted its plan to the Capital Region District.

Chamber president Cedric Steele today said the chamber would devote a maximum of $22,000 to salaries.

When the economic development function was run last year by the four core municipalities, they paid commissioner Barry Mayhew and his secretary $42,972 in salaries and benefits.

"That left only about $6,000 for external promotion. We believe you can't do much promoting on only $6,000."

Steele said the chamber could reduce costs by using some of its existing facilities and by giving extra duties to Brian Small, the chamber's full-time manager.

In a proposed budget, the chamber would add a research worker on a salary of $15,000 plus a half-day secretary for $7,000. This would leave $32,400 for external promotion.

Steele said if the chamber's proposal is accepted, it will work this way:

There will be a vigorous external promotion campaign, including advertisements in selected business publications.

Anyone inquiring about industrial or commercial opportunities would direct his inquiries to the research worker, who would assemble the facts from research already compiled by the provincial government, the region, the municipalities and other planning organizations.

The research worker would then forward this information to the businessman, inviting him to Victoria.

Upon his arrival he would be met by Small, the chamber manager, who would help him to meet the officials he would have to deal with.

The research worker could obtain any additional information he might require.

Steele said the chamber had high hopes for an industrial development commissioner when it first proposed the idea in the mid 1970s.

But, as it turned out, little has been achieved so far.

And since the resignation of Mayhew the office has been floundering, Steele said.

The commission was originally financed by the provincial government and the core municipalities but now the function has been transferred to the CRD.

Chimney blamed in Langford fire

A faulty chimney was blamed for an early morning fire that caused $2,000 to $3,000 damage to a house at 963 Bray in Langford.

Chief Al Le Quesne said the fire likely smouldered for several hours before owner Robert Hillard saw smoke coming from under the floor boards near the fireplace about 3 a.m.

Le Quesne went to investigate at Hillard's request and when he got into a crawl space found the floor joists on fire.

It took firemen nearly two hours to put out the blaze.

Le Quesne said the masonry chimney had been improperly constructed and a portion of the firebox had been built directly on the sub-flooring.

It was the second such fire in Langford this week. On Sunday about $1,000 damage was done when fire broke out in the studding around a masonry chimney at 825 Goldstream.

RCV future still misty

The future of the Racquet Club of Victoria is still undecided, Racquet Club Holdings Ltd. president Don Francis said today.

The board executive met Tuesday to discuss three proposals but didn't reach any conclusions.

Racquet Club of Victoria Holdings Ltd. owns the club.

Another meeting is scheduled for Feb. 5, Francis said.

Members of the executive are examining an offer by Saanich to assume the club's $850,000 mortgage debt and turn the facility into a public recreation centre.

Another proposal under discussion is an offer by a private developer but Francis won't release details.

The third alternative is an attempt by leaseholders of the Racquet Club of Victoria Society to save the facility by raising money from the sale of $750 preferred shares.

Society financial director David Moore said earlier this week the club hasn't raised the $200,000 it needs to make a purchase offer, but a number of applications have been sent to interested members.

Francis said the holdings company rejected two earlier proposals from the private sector because they involved commercial development of part of the site.

Concord Developments came up with a proposal to build a 150-unit motel on the site and lease the tennis courts, curling rink and gymnasium back to the society.

That proposal and a similar offer were turned down because the holdings company is primarily interested in keeping the club intact as a recreational facility, he explained.

Saanich is hoping to get a government grant to help it acquire the facility and is still waiting to hear from Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe.

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis said recently the most the municipality can hope for is a one-third grant under the province's Recreation Assistance Program.

Insurance proposed for auxiliaries

Saanich police board is recommending the core municipalities take out insurance to cover unprotected auxiliary police officers.

Chief Robert Peterson will discuss insurance in case of injury and death with Greater Victoria area police chiefs.

The board has been told by the attorney-general's ministry it will not assist municipalities in insuring the officers.

Drowning victim found

The body of a 52-year-old man who drowned with his wife last Friday when their small boat capsized in Sooke basin was found Tuesday.

Sooke RCMP said two civilian divers located the body of Louis Planes shortly after 2 p.m. under submerged logs between Hutchinson and Cooper's coves where the boat sank.

The body of Planes' wife, Barbara, 50, was found Sunday under a nearby log boom.

Coroner Roy Girling will announce later whether he will hold an inquest.

Refit job awarded Yarrows

The Yarrows shipyard of the Burrard Yarrows Corporation has been awarded a $642,856 contract for the refit of the destroyer-escort HMCS Terra Nova, Progressive Conservative Esquimalt-Saanich candidate Donald Munro said today.

He said the Esquimalt yard's bid was the lowest received.

The Terra Nova will go into refit on Jan. 28. The job is to be completed March 21.

11.7% budget increase for western recreation

By BRENDA DALGLISH

The Juan de Fuca Parks and Recreation Commission has approved a 1980 budget of nearly $2.3 million — an increase to taxpayers of 11.7 per cent.

The budget, approved unanimously by the commission, calls for spending of $2,296,790.

Of that, $1,393,930 will come from Metchosin, Colwood and Langford property taxes while the remainder will be collected from miscellaneous sources such as user fees and grants from the provincial government.

The budget now goes to the Capital Regional Board for final approval.

The commission at its regular monthly meeting Tuesday was presented with a budget that was 17.3 per cent higher than last year's $2,054,010.

Parks and recreation administrator Doug Ruttan, however, told commission members if they wanted to reduce the increase he could pare about $66,500.

Ruttan suggested cutbacks on such things as construction of a road in Juan de Fuca Park, purchase of four sets of outdoor bleechers, construction of a playing area near the Little League baseball diamond and landscaping of tennis courts which will be built this year.

RUTTAN
. . . cuts possible

Commission member Dick Emery suggested the commission consider financing such capital projects as construction of a lacrosse box and tennis courts instead of paying for the work out of the commission's operating budget.

But commission chairman Howard Drummond disagreed.

"I'd like to see us keep away from getting in debt for those things and incurring the interest cost on borrowed money. I think we're really doing the community a service if we don't finance them," Drummond said.

"But if we put things off and they cost more money to build when we do get around to them, then we're not really losing any money by financing them," said Emery.

The commission agreed to consider financing large capital expenditures.

The commission is responsible for recreation programming in Colwood, Langford and Metchosin.

UTA takes over search for transit terminal

By NORMAN GIDNEY

The search for a downtown location for a new multi purpose transportation terminal has been taken over by the Urban Transit Authority and within two months a specific site will be named, a UTA official said Tuesday.

Assistant general manager Larry Miller said the provincial government asked the UTA to find a location quickly so funds can be included for the project in the 1980-81 B.C. budget now under preparation.

"We must very quickly act on the problem," he told the central business district advisory committee of Victoria city council.

Pacific Coach Lines' lease on its present terminal behind the Empress Hotel expires in July, 1981, and the CPR will not extend it.

The UTA got involved when the Crown corporation asked for cabinet approval for money for a new terminal of its own.

Miller said the deputy minister of municipal affairs asked the UTA in on Dec. 1 because local officials had been urging that all bus and rail transportation be combined in a single terminal.

"They were anxious to avoid duplication of costs," he said.

The authority sent a questionnaire at the end of December to the major commercial airlines and float plane operators, the bus companies (including tour operators), taxi owners and VIA Rail, which operates the E & N passenger service, asking for their requirements and comments.

Preliminary results indicate a need for co-ordination of available services, Miller said, a need "for a central place where people can go for transportation information."

The UTA is also drawing on the assistance of Victoria traffic engineer Derek Wild's staff and other municipal personnel in drafting the report, Miller said.

The UTA should have narrowed down the criteria for choosing a site by mid-March will have narrowed down the hunt to a specific location.

The E & N committee and Mayor Bill Tindall of Victoria have in the past suggested the block opposite the Labatt's brewery on Government and the block immediately east of city hall. Both are mostly vacant.

The UTA study will be submitted to the transit committee of the Capital Regional District board, chaired by Mayor Tindall, for a technical review. Miller also invited any submissions which downtown businessmen or other interested groups may have.

Before the UTA got involved, the PCL was believed to be pushing for only a short move to provincial government property at Humboldt and Blanshard, which is now a parking lot.

Miller said later in an interview the UTA could end up as the owner and operator of the new terminal building, leasing space to PCL for its inter-city bus service, to B.C. Hydro for local bus operations, to tour operators, VIA Rail and others.

But if the study determines that a new terminal is required only for PCL the transit authority probably would bow out. Miller described the UTA's role in the planning as mainly that of facilitator or catalyst.

Greece remains willing to provide permanent home for the Olympics

ATHENS (AP) — A suggestion by President Carter of the United States that Greece be made the permanent site of the summer Olympic Games is interpreted here as reinforcing a Greek call for removing political and commercial colorings from the Games.

Two weeks ago, Premier Constantine Caramanlis renewed his two-year-old proposal that the Games return permanently to this country, where the ancient Games originated and the first modern Olympics were held in 1896.

"The removal of the political and commercial overtones from the Olympic Games, and restoration of the true Olympic spirit is the main aim of the Greek proposal," says Achilles Caramanlis, the premier's brother, who acts as an undersecretary responsible for sports.

Nicos Philaretos, a ranking member of the Hellenic Olympic Committee (HOC) has suggested that a certain area of land be ceded to the International Olympic Committee, and be held on an extra-territorial basis, so that no national conflict could affect the Games. This, however, would require an alteration of the Greek constitution, a difficult proposition.

Carter said Sunday he had asked the U.S. Olympic Committee to push for the Games to be moved from Moscow unless Soviet troops withdraw from Afghanistan in a month. He also urged other countries to follow the U.S. lead, but Philaretos said as of now Greece will not boycott the Moscow Games.

"In recent years, the number of letes in the Olympic Games has gotten out of proportion," said Caramanlis, adding, "If this trend continues, the Games will be held only in a handful of countries wealthy enough to meet the vast expenses."

Philaretos said that for the Games to be returned here permanently it would be necessary to change the Olympic charter by a two-thirds vote of the IOC.

But some preliminary studies already have been made in Greece.

The two sites most likely to be considered for a permanent Games site are Athens, where the first modern Olympiad was held in 1896, or at Olympia, 300 kilometres west of the capital, where the Games were held in ancient times.

Premier Caramanlis recently laid the foundation stone of the 80,000-seat Athens Olympic Stadium which is scheduled to be ready in 1982 for the European track and field games.

Caramanlis said that the cost of building a permanent Olympic site in Greece would most probably involve financial contributions from participating countries, preferably on a basis proportional to their economic strength.

Greece plans to make a proposal to the IOC when it meets Feb. 10 at Lake Placid, N.Y.

Soviet athletes ready for trip to Lake Placid

CHAMONIX, France (AP) — Undeterred by President Carter's call to cancel, move or postpone the Moscow Olympics, a Soviet team of more than 150 athletes plans to compete in the Winter Games scheduled next month for Lake Placid, N.Y., team officials said Tuesday.

Members of the six-man Soviet Alpine ski team, competing in World Cup races here this week, said they were "enthusiastically looking forward" to the Lake Placid Games and refused to be stymied by the Soviet-American crisis over the Russian intervention in Afghanistan.

Chief Soviet trainer Sergei Grishchenko said his six skiers "are not interested in politics — they are interested only in sport, and sport has nothing to do with politics."

Grishchenko said the Soviet team at Lake Placid probably would be headed by Sports Minister Sergei Pavlov.

It will include Alpine and Nordic skiers, hockey players, figure skaters, bobsledders and luge and biathlon specialists.

Mexico, France will send their teams to Moscow

The French and Mexican Olympic committees both announced Tuesday that their respective countries will participate in the Moscow Olympics, which have become the centre of the worldwide storm surrounding the Soviet Union's military presence in Afghanistan.

The International Olympic Committee has said it could not move the Games and the United States Olympic Committee was polling athletes to see how they felt about sending a team.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Congress opened a new session with speeches and bills calling for a U.S. boycott of the 1980 Summer Olympics.

But international reaction was mixed. Here is some of the world opinion:

The French National Olympic and Sports Committee said France would be represented at Moscow. It also called on the IOC to consider the Greek government's offer of providing a permanent site for the Olympic Games.

Claude Collard, president of the French National Olympic Comittee, had said: "France will be at Moscow. . . President Carter's problems will not change France's attitude."

Mario Vazquez Rana, president of the Mexican Olympic Committee, said Mexico intends to send 50 or 60 athletes to the Summer Games.

"I have talked to many of the presidents of Olympic committees and no one is for the supposed boycott," said Vazquez Rana, who also heads the association of National Olympic Committees.

The Canadian Olympic Association has said it would not "at this time" conduct a poll to see how its athletes felt about participating in the Moscow Games. Richard Pound, president of the COA, said: "We would only do this if we found a strong boycott spreading around the world."

In London, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said she would ask Britain's Olympic authorities to seek an alternative site to Moscow for the Games, including possible sites in Britain.

West German chancellor Helmut Schmidt said his government would consult with its western allies and await a report from its foreign ministry before making a decision. The opposition Christian Union Party strongly endorsed Carter.

Lanny sparks Rockies

By Canadian Press

Lanny McDonald visited Vancouver just long enough to give Colorado Rockies their first win of the New Year at the expense of the slumping Canucks.

McDonald has been commuting between Toronto and various National Hockey League cities since he was traded by the Maple Leafs to the Rockies late last month. He has visited Toronto six times and was back home earlier this week to accompany his wife and newborn daughter home from the hospital.

He arrived on the West Coast at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday and seven hours later he had scored two goals — including the winner on a brilliant individual effort — in helping the Rockies end a nine-game winless streak with a 5-3 decision over the Canucks, who now are winless in their last eight games.

"I like playing for the Rockies because the coach (Don Cherry) instills confidence in the guys to play like a team," said McDonald, who has nine goals in 12 games since the four-player deal. "You want to play for a coach like Cherry and, when everyone does his job like we did tonight, it makes winning a game like this so nice.

"All the players want to turn the Colorado situation around and we've developed some pride in our play despite our record."

Cherry called McDonald the "best right winger in hockey because of the way he goes up and down his wing, doing his job properly."

McDonald broke a 3-3 tie at 12:44 of the last period when he circled the Vancouver net and slipped the puck into the far corner past a startled Glen Hanlon, who had guarded the short side of the net. Typical of McDonald, he gave linemates Randy Pierce and Doug Berry much of the credit for the goal.

"Berry did a heck of a job digging the puck out of the corner," McDonald said, "and Pierce was able to tie up the defenceman in front of the net, giving me lots of room to operate.

Rene Robert, Pierce and Mike Gillis also scored for the Rockies as they won for the first time since Dec. 31.

Vancouver, with only a tie in its last eight games, got goals from Stan Smyl, Thomas Gradin and Chris Oddleifson, plus considerable jeering from the crowd of 12,627 during the last four minutes of the game when they failed to generate much offensive punch against Colorado netminder Hardy Astrom.

Cherry also praised the play of defenceman Trevor Johansen, who returned to the lineup after missing 18 games because of a broken thumb. Johansen did a good job of clearing the traffic in front of Astrom.

"If we can get adequate goaltending — like we did tonight — we can beat a lot of teams in the league," he added. "There's a little light at the end of the tunnel — and it's not a train."

The Canucks, who recently played 16 of 20 games on the road, performed like a team which was still playing away from home. They didn't skate and they weren't aggressive in front of their own net.

"We're not skating and, when the takeouts disappear, we're just not capable of winning," said coach Harry Neale of the Canucks. "We could use a 12-year veteran right now to lead us out of the ..."

In other games, New York Islanders defeated the Canadiens 2-1 for the third straight time this season and fifth in a row going back to last season, Toronto Maple Leafs defeated Atlanta Flames 4-2, Washington Capitals edged Winnipeg Jets 5-4, Philadelphia Flyers downed St. Louis Blues 3-1 and New York Rangers shaded Los Angeles Kings, 5-4.

Caught in brawl, fans launch suit

NEW YORK (AP) — Four spectators have filed a $7-million suit, claiming they were beaten and stomped on during a Boston Bruins-New York Rangers National Hockey League game at Madison Square Garden last Dec. 23.

Among the defendants in the suit are the Garden, the National Hockey League, the City of New York, Sonny Werblin, president of Madison Square Garden Corp., the Rangers, the Bruins and Paul Mooney, president of the company that owns the Bruins.

The suit, filed in Manhattan's U.S. District Court on Tuesday, claims the attack came after an argument between players on the ice at the conclusion of the game.

Emanuel Kaptain of Clark, N.J., his two sons, John and James, and Jack Guttenplan of Ocean, N.J., also named nine Bruins as defendants: Terry O'Reilly, Peter McNab, Al Secord, Mike Milbury, Stan Jonathan, Craig MacTavish, John Wensink, Bob Miller and Brad McCrimmon.

The plaintiffs were to hold a news conference this morning.

Calgary nearer Victoria's heels

Lethbridge Broncos and Calgary Wranglers entertained 2,473 fans Tuesday evening as they battled to a 4-4 Western Hockey League overtime tie in Lethbridge.

The tie enabled the Eastern Division Wranglers to move within a point of the Western Division Victoria Cougars in the over-all points battle.

In other games, Billings Bighorns defeated visiting Seattle Breakers 5-2 and Brandon Wheat Kings defeated visiting Saskatoon Blades, 4-1

It was a story of goaltending as Warren Skorodenski of the Wranglers and Cleo Rowein of the Broncos were superb. Skorodenski faced 51 shots, while Rowin faced 42.

Skorodenski was very sharp in the overtime as he blocked all 11 shots directed his way.

Broncos led 1-0 after the first period, but trailed 2-1 after 40 minutes.

The Bighorns led 1-0 and 3-1 by periods.

Busy night slated for hockey squads

South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League games will pit Lake Cowichan Baird's Trucking against Oak Bay Trios at 8 in Lake Cowichan Arena and Fuller Lake Flyers against Juan de Fuca Gulls at 8:15 in Fuller Lake Arena.

Esquimalt Maple Leafs tackle Duncan Silver Park Blades at 8:15 at Esquimalt Sports Centre and PPCLI Pats tangle with Western Homes Buckaroos at 8:30 at Juan de Fuca Arena in South Island Big Six Hockey League games.

In basketball, Victoria Athletics face DataTech in a Victoria Senior "B" Men's League game at 9 in S.J. Willis Junior High School while Valkyries take on Vidalin Construction in a Victoria Senior "B" Women's League game at 9 in Lansdowne Junior High School.

Television viewers have an opportunity to take in the National Hockey League game between New York Rangers and Vancouver Canucks at 8 on Channel 8.

Speedskating aces in March meet

max low

By MAX LOW

One thing about sports is that if you get a chance to watch some of the best in the world in action — whatever the field — it's usually worth going to see.

And, dedicated fans or not, Victorians will certainly have an opportunity to see some of the finest speedskaters anywhere when the North American indoor championships are held in Memorial Arena, Mar. 28-30.

Canadians from as far away as Nova Scotia, Americans from New York to the west coast and possibly the national indoor teams from Australia, Japan and Britain will be here following competition in the world indoor championships at Milan, Italy, the previous week.

President Jim Shields of the Esquimalt Speedskating Club, which is staging the event, believes this kind of talent should bring in fans galore.

"They have seen many of these world-class skaters competing in the Winter Olympics and in other televised outdoor competitions so I'm sure they'll find it exciting to come and watch them indoors," Shields says.

And another plus for local fans is that, although the North American championships are alternated each year between Canada and the United States, this is the first time they have been held in B.C. Two years ago they were in Ste. Foy, Que., and last winter they were staged in Los Angeles.

All skaters taking part, and Shields says there'll be at least 150 and probably a lot more, must compete at four distances and the titles in each age group ranging from midget (12 and 13-year-olds) to senior (over 18) go to the ones with the most points over-all.

Judges award five points for each win, three for a second place, two for third and one point for fourth but the distances vary considerably with ages. Younger skaters race from 200 metres to 800 metres while from juniors up to seniors the men and women both race 500, 1,000, 1,500 and 3,000 metres.

What many Canadians may not realize, says Shields, is that Canada is ranked first in the world in both men's and women's indoor speedskating.

"All members of our four-man team placed among the top six in last year's world championships in Norway and Louis Barril of Quebec finished second over-all behind Toto of Japan," he explains. "Canada's four women skaters were all in the top eight in Norway and Sylvia Daigle of Sherbrooke, Que., was the world champion."

Actually, Daigle and Kathy Turnbull of Regina tied for first place on points but the Quebec woman won a skateoff for the title.

The whole Canadian team will be here in March and Shields is pretty sure that Toto will be over to defend the men's title he won last year in Los Angeles.

Jim Shields and his family just about are the Esquimalt Speed Skating Club. He formed it in 1966 and has been president and coach ever since.

And what chance does he think his skaters have of a title?

Well, his daughter Brenda, who now is ..., probably has the best chance. She was fourth over-all in juvenile girls last year in Los Angeles and was runner-up to the North American champion outdoors.

Son David, now 21 and ranked third in Canada, also has a chance of a medal. He hasn't done much indoor skating but is down in Lake Placid right now training frantically for the event in Victoria.

"Then there's Rod Phillips, another club member who is 17 and is doing well right now," Shields says. "He has broken two B.C. records already this year.

"Certainly our skaters have the talent to cause some surprises," he points out. "But whatever happens, fans can be sure there'll be plenty of excitement!"

National wildlife plan worth consideration

Peter Larkin, dean of graduate studies at the University of British Columbia, came up with an interesting suggestion in his keynote address at the 1979 Federal-Provincial Wildlife Conference.

Pointing out the merits of the federal-provincial Salmonid Enhancement Program in British Columbia, Larkin suggests that a similar move could be made for wildlife throughout Canada.

"Are Pacific salmon worth more than all the rest of the wildlife in Canada? A program is now being developed for Atlantic salmon, which would also be a good investment of perhaps another $300 million," he exclaimed.

"Are the salmon of the two coasts worth more than all the rest of the wildlife in Canada."

Larkin added the program should involve the widest range of species possible and centre wherever people would benefit from the enhancement scheme.

"When you think about it, why not shoot for $600 million in a 10-year national wildlife program, half of the money federal and half of it provincial and municipal; half of it for urban wildlife and half of it for rural wildlife, with a major effort to achieve public participation in the planning of projects and their execution.

"In the long pull, governments survive by helping the causes in which the citizens are personally involved."

Harkening back to the theme of the conference — Habitat is the key — Larkin stated:

"Recognizing that protection and good management of what we have is necessary but not sufficient, that good habitat for wildlife has and will continue to dwindle, that we are not involved in an exact and sophisticated science, that trial and error with evaluation is the best path to follow, and that public participation is essential, we should forthwith make a major national effort to improve and augment a wide range of habitats for wildlife.

"One might say that conservationists should be progressive conservatives with liberal budgets operating in new democratic ways."

The conference delegates responded by passing a recommendation stating that "an outline for a national habitat strategy be debated" at this year's conference "and that the possibility of establishing a national mechanism for funding such a strategy be investigated, whereby all jurisdictions in Canada should work co-operatively to impliment such a strategy via some central fund."

A federal-provincial steering committee is now pursuing the recommendation and is expected to make a report to the conference in Ottawa during the last week in June.

Speed is essential because as Larkin so aptly put it:

"If you really believe that 'Habitat is the key', then the thing to do is to get on with it.

"If you aren't sure what you should do, be careful, but try anyway."

NIBBLES: Steven Rose topped the Frostbite Derby for Chinook Club members of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association by landing a 12 pound, two ounce chinook Sunday.

Bob Redgrave was second with a 11:12-pounder and Gerry MacPherson third with an 8:08-pounder.

Dennis Summerhayes, John Rose, Gary Vaughan and John Sadler all collected hidden-weight prizes.

In case you hadn't noticed — this is National Ski Week in Canada.

The fifth annual celebration centres around the theme — Ski . . . for the Health of it.

With over three million people in Canada taking to the hills, skiing has emerged as one of the nation's most popular winter activities.

And, judging by the crowds this writer found on both Forbidden Plateau and Mt. Washington last weekend, the sport is taking off in a big way on Vancouver Island.

Celtics, Bulls both winners

By Associated Press

Boston Celtics signed Pete Maravich but it was Chicago Bulls who were hot as a pistol Tuesday night.

The Celtics, battling Philadelphia 76ers for the best record in the National Basketball Association, announced the signing of free agent Maravich shortly after Pistol Pete watched them defeat Houston Rockets, 112-106.

Bulls, on the other hand, had all the weapons they needed in shooting a team record 70 per cent from the floor in trouncing Detroit Pistons, 145-131.

In other action, Kansas City Kings downed Atlanta Hawks 101-89, Utah Jazz overtimed Milwaukee Bucks 127-122, San Antonio Spurs crushed San Diego Clippers 129-109 and Cleveland Cavaliers whipped Washington Bullets, 114-91.

Rickey Sobers and David Greenwood scored 26 points apiece as the Bulls rolled up their highest point total in four years. The Bulls and Pistons set a Chicago Stadium mark by scoring 92 points, 50 by Detroit, in the fourth quarter.

The Bulls shot 83 per cent in the first quarter, raced to a 67-52 halftime lead and coasted the rest of the way. But from listening to coach Jerry Sloan, you'd have sworn they lost.

"The fact that we won tonight and scored so many points is indicative of one thing only — and that is that we shot the ball well, but we did not execute well, at times," Sloan said. "Our defence broke down and we panicked in the fourth quarter when they put a press on us. This team has a long way to go before it reaches the stage where I consider them competitive."

The Celtics, on the other hand, not only are competitive but think Maravich may give them the edge they need in their scrap with the 76ers. Unfortunately, the 31-year-old Pistol no sooner signed than he said he planned to go on the injured list until he recovers from a "slightly pulled groin muscle."

Maravich, whose aching knees passed a physical examination by the 76ers' doctors on Monday, said he weighed "a lot of factors" in signing a one-year pact with the Celtics, winners of numerous NBA titles.

"I would rather have him here than defend against him at Philadelphia," said Boston coach Bill Fitch.

Fitch was able to joke after the Celtics blew a 22-point lead following an injury to Dave Cowens early in the second half but rallied down the stretch to beat Houston with reserve Gerald Henderson contributing six key points.

Better break for Islanders in era of curling changes

By BILL WALKER

This could well be the era of change for all curling in the province.

It has already begun and the innovations aren't over yet.

In retrospect, the Pacific Coast Curling Association last year proposed a new plan for the men's provincial playoffs in cooperation with Labatt's, the new Brier sponsor.

That plan later met with approval of both the PCCA and the B.C. Curling Association, was adopted and recently officially announced. To wit, now there is an eight-rink playoff between the PCCA and BCCA rather than a best-of-three final between association champions as in the past.

Next year, the PCCA will go a step further and adopt a 16-rink, triple-knockout playoff in place of the present eight-rink, double-knockout setup.

Meanwhile, the ladies were also active and perhaps set the stage for the men to follow by voting to divide the Island into two zones.

That was done and this year the Island has two reps, Ruby Niemeyer of Victoria Club and Barb Parker of Comox in the provincial women's championship, whereas in the past it had but one.

The girls and seniors also have two reps. Lana Lacheur of Oak Bay will represent District 8 (the south) in the provincial girls' event while the seniors' representative will be determined this week at Kerry Park.

The men got that message, loud and clear, and now are actively pursuing the possibility of also having two zones on the Island.

The matter already has been discussed at the Zone level and two separate studies have been launched.

Island president Dick Austin is in charge in the South and Ralph Boyd in the North. They will report their findings to the Island executive in Campbell River this weekend.

Proponents of the idea feel that as the Island Zone has a larger number of accredited curlers than either of the other two zones in the PCCA — Vancouver and Fraser Valley-Richmond — they should have better representation when it comes to playoffs.

In short they want a bigger piece of the action, especially with the representation in the PCCA playoffs to be doubled to 16 teams from eight next season.

Latest figures give the Island 4,699 accredited curlers, 2,199 in the North and 2,500 in the South. Zone 2 (Fraser Valley and Richmond) has 3,775 curlers and Vancouver 2,763.

Meanwhile, things get even more serious in playdowns this week.

With the District 8 senior women winding up at Kerry Park today, the men can't be far behind, and aren't.

The Pacific Coast Curling Association senior men's final goes at Esquimalt this weekend with the first draw Friday at 8 p.m.

Then comes the feature. The provincial senior men's final will follow at Esquimalt, Monday and Tuesday.

Winner of that event will represent the province in the Canadian final at St. John, N.B., March 9-14.

Representing the Island in the PCCA event will be rinks skipped by Tony Gutoski of Victoria Club, Glen Harper of Duncan, Howie Christopherson of Nanaimo and Clarence McLean of Port Alberni.

Elsewhere, the four South Island men's Labatt's Tankard reps are off to the eight-rink Island zone final at Campbell River this weekend. Two rinks will qualify for the PCCA final at New Westminster, Feb. 1-3.

Representing the South will be rinks skipped by Brad Clarke and Jim Gallaugher of Playland, Al Frame of the Racquet Club and Tim Horrigan of Victoria Club.

Skipping the North entries will be Gary and Bert Wright of Duncan, Al Browett of Powell River and Neil McDermid of Port Alberni.

Members of the Mt. Douglas rink that will compete in the provincial high school boys' championship at Quesnel, Jan. 31-Feb. 2, are Ralph Kitchen (skip), Tony Tuson, Russ McGowan and Chris Christianson. Mt. Doug collected Island honors last weekend at Esquimalt as a Cowichan quartet won the girls' crown.

Champion resigns

ATLANTA (AP) — Jim Champion, a defensive line coach for Atlanta Falcons since 1977, resigned to enter private business, the National Football League club has announced.

Petch ousts Duncan

MILL BAY — Flora Martin of Victoria Curling Club, defending Canadian champion, is one win away from clinching a berth in the British Columbia senior women's final.

Martin and rinkmates Elsie Humphrey, Verle McKeown and Edna Messum were to meet the winner of a morning game between Elin Petch of VCC and Lee Jameson of Oak Bay in the championship final of the Zone Eight playdowns at noon in Kerry Park Curling Club.

If Martin loses, another game in the double-loss elimination event will be played this afternoon.

Martin won the "A" final on Monday while Petch scored on the 10th end for a 9-7 decision Tuesday over clubmate Claire Duncan in the "B" final.

The winner of the 11-rink playdown advances to the provincial final Feb. 16-22 at West Vancouver Hollyburn.

Vikings top Athletes after staging rally

It took some straight shooting in the dying minutes but the University of Victoria Vikings rallied Tuesday night for a come-from-behind 72-69 win over Athletes in Action in an exhibition men's basketball game at the McKinnon Gym.

Although accurate on long shots, the AIAs weren't up to traditional form the rest of the time but clung to a 67-64 lead until UVic guard Craig Higgins cut that to 67-66.

That seemed to be the turning point and Higgins scored again with 58 seconds remaining to give the Vikings a 68-67 lead.

Kelly Dukeshire's layup increased that to 70-67 and, although the AIA's top scorer Jeff Fuhrmann, who had 18 points, brought the visitors to within one point at 70-69, Dukeshire was successful on two free-throws to make the final score 72-69.

Billy Loos was top scorer for the Vikings with 27 points and Gerald Kazanowski had 15.

It was the first time in three exhibition clashes over the last two years that the Vikings had beaten the team of evangelists from Abbotsford.

Totems topple Mt. Doug Rams

Victoria Totems dropped Mt. Douglas Rams from unbeaten ranks with a convincing 89-68 victory in Greater Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League play Tuesday.

In other games, Belmont Braves tripped Spectrum 87-44, Dunsmuir Demonds mangled Lambrick Park 97-17 and Stelly's Stingers defeated St. Michael's University School 80-65 in an exhibition game.

Will Reid sank 25 points, Darren Alexander added 17 and Ryan Campbell contributed 15 for the Totems, now 1-2 in the "AA" division. Greg Webber set the pace for Rams, now 3-1, with 24 points.

Rob Eckstrom led Braves with 24 points and Rob Domay topped Spectrum with 18.

Tim Dean fired 30 points to spark Demons in the one-sided affair.

Stingers were led by Dan Barney's 25-point effort while Gerry Berger-North topped SMU marksmen with 33.

In Victoria Senior High School Girls' League play, Claremont bounced Stelly's 66-36, Belmont downed Spectrum 64-53, Mt. Douglas defeated Victoria 69-52, Esquimalt dropped Reynolds 58-37 and Parkland tumbled Dunsmuir, 32-21.

Mona McIvor and Jenny Webster each fired 17 points to spark the Claremont attack.

Karen Rainey led the Belmont victory with 14 points while Carla Mackereth topped Spectrum with 17.

Mt. Doug was paced by a 28-point effort from Laura Favor and Brigid Flynn topped Victoria with 17.

Cory Aspden led Esquimalt's win with 15 points.

Kelly Hunter set the pace for Parkland, now 6-0, with 12 points while Marie Johnston sank 15 for Dunsmuir.

Meanwhile, Oak Bay Bays of the Boy's League are set to stage their Mini Oak Leaf Classic tournament starting Thursday.

Play in the eight-team, single-loss elimination affair starts at 3:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday and resumes at 10 a.m. Saturday with the final set for 3:15 p.m.

Gladstone and Magee of Vancouver, Campbell River Tyees, Rams, Spectrum, Parkland Panthers, Totems and Bays have entered the tourney.

In a North Island League game Tuesday, Gary Stockford fired 23 points and Gerry Keller added 16 as Cowichan Thunderbirds crushed Highlands 68-37 at Comox.

Monte Carlo a white nightmare

MONTE CARLO (AP) — West German Walter Rohrl, driving a Fiat 131, took firm control of the lead today in the Monte Carlo rally in what one driver called a white nightmare.

Rohrl remained at the top of the provisional standings after the nights driving over the treacherous, snow-covered course, ahead of Swedes Per Eklund, in a VW Golf GTI, and Bjorn Waldegaard, in another Fiat. Anders Kullang of Sweden, in an Opel Ascona, was fourth and Bernard Darniche, last years winner, was fifth in a Lancia Stratos.

Early today, only 140 cars remained out of the 236 that started Saturday from nine European cities.

Hollett surprises in title battle

HALIFAX (CP) — Ralph Hollett of Halifax, a virtual unknown in Canadian boxing ranks, won the Canadian middleweight boxing title Tuesday night by pounding out a unanimous 12 round decision over Fernand Marcotte of Quebec City.

Hollett using a spearing left jab and a sharp right cross, pounded the shorter Marcotte almost at will through most of the late rounds.

Marcotte, 31, who won the championship three years ago from Lawrence Hafey of Stellarton, N.S., and had been idle since last June, had trouble reaching his taller opponent and did most of his damage along the ropes and in the corner.

But he was unable to mount a sustained attack againt the jabbing, dancing Hollett.

Hollett, 26, was ranked seventh among Canadian middleweights with a 5-5 won-lost record. He is also the Canadian middleweight kick-boxing champion.

There were no knockdowns but Marcotte slipped to the canvas in the ninth after missing a looping right.

Both fighters weighed in at 159.

The three judges voted for Hollett 55-53; 57-54 and 58 54.

Hollett appeared slow and clumsy in the early rounds as Marcotte dug left hooks to the body in an effort to get his opponent's arms down. He kept lunging at the Halifax boxer who managed to keep his hands up throughout the fight.

'The Shadow' lurked behind every Taylor move

By ERNIE FEDORUK

The sudden death of Elmer Kreller in Victoria this week revived one of the legends of Canadian hockey, and nobody can tell it better than Gord Williamson, one of Canada's pioneer sports announcers.

Now in retirement in Victoria, Williamson broadcast the 1939 Memorial Cup junior final between Oshawa Generals and Edmonton Athletic Club for Edmonton's CFRN.

The legend got its start in the first game when Oshawa star Billy Taylor turned in a one-man show by scoring three goals and earning two assists as the Eastern champions handily defeated the EACs.

Edmonton coach Lefty Grove then assigned Kreller to shadow Taylor. Kreller was ordered to ignore everything except his checking assignment and "to follow Taylor wherever he went."

The legend flourished when Taylor failed to score in the remaining two games of the then best-of-three series.

The Edmonton team came back to win the second game and force a third and deciding game.

In that one, Kreller continued to follow Taylor's every move. During one stoppage of play, Taylor skated over to the Oshawa players' bench. Kreller followed.

Taylor paused at the gate, turned to Kreller and said: "I'm going to the dressing-room urinal. Are you coming?"

"Certainly," Kreller said, and followed Taylor into the Oshawa dressing room.

The power-packed Oshawa team won the third game and the Canadian junior championship but Westerners will always remember the series that forever stamped Elmer Kreller as "The Shadow."

Angela beats the boys, but not antiquated rule

ANGELA TAYLOR . . . fastest indoor time

TORONTO (CP) — It doesn't really count when sprinter Angela Taylor beats the boys, at least not in the record books.

Last week Taylor, 21, of Toronto competed in an mixed male-female 400-metre event at an all-comers meet at York University..

Not only did the bronze medal winner at the Pan-American Games win the race, but she clocked the fastest time ever by a woman over a 400-metre indoor course with a time of 52.3 seconds — 1.6 seconds below the previous indoor mark. Taylor was also less than .7 seconds off the Canadian outdoor record owned by Joyce Yakubowich of Victoria.

Taylor's time, however, won't go into the record books because of an antinquated rule in the track and field manuals which states that records set in mixed races do not count.

The Ontario Track and Field Association doesn't see any logic in the existing situation and is on Taylor's side.

Cecil Smith, executive director of the OTFA said his organization will make a proposal to the Canadian Track and Field Association that it petition the International Amateur Athletic Federation to allow women to officially compete against men and if a record is established in a mixed race that it be allowed to stand.

"We've sent a proposal to the Canadian Track and Field Association," said Smith. "It's been talked about before but it's never been contested as far as I know. What we're asking for is a hearing where we can put it through as an official motion for a technical rule change."

Smith said the rule was "archaic" and not in tune with the '80s.

Taylor said she understood the rule is on the books because track and field officials in the past felt a women was gaining an advantage by running against men. The thinking was that men would serve the role of a rabbit for women.

"I ran away from them from the start of the race," Taylor said. "They sure didn't help me."

Taylor came to Canada from Jamaica five years ago. As an elementary and high schol student in her homeland, she ran strictly on raw talent.

"I didn't have a coach," she said. "I just got up and ran."

She was discovered locally at a track meet in January of 1978 by track coach Peter Cross when she ran a 61-second 400-metre race. Cross directed her to her current coach Charlie Francis.

"She wasn't in shape before," Francis said. "She was running on natural ability. We started by working on her conditioning. That's the easiest place to improve. Just now we've started to work on her power."

Francis says he sees no sign of Taylor levelling off.

"She's the fastest improving person I've ever seen," he said. "She's improving faster than anyone in the world at the moment."

Wolves upset

LONDON (AP) — A last-minute goal on a penalty shot by John Robertson gave defending-champion Nottingham Forest a 1-0 win over Liverpool in an English League Cup first-leg, semi-final soccer match Tuesday night.

Referee Ron Challis called the penalty after Liverpool goalkeeper Ray Clemence fouled striker Garry Birtles.

Third Division Swindon Town upset First Division Wolverhampton Wanderers 2-1 in the other semi-final match.

Andy Rowland scored his 21st goal of the season to put Swindon ahead after 13 minutes, but Peter Daniel tied the score with a 26th-minute flying header.

Striker Alan Mayes gave Swindon the victory with a goal in the 87th minute.

The second leg of both semi-finals will be played Feb. 12.

Canadians lose volleyball clash

SOFIA, Bulgaria (CP) — Bulgaria defeated Canada 15-4, 15-2, 15-11 in a men's Olympic volleyball qualification tournament.

In other matches, East Germany defeated Mexico 3-0, South Korea downed Czechoslovakia 3-1 and Romania downed Japan 3-1.

McLean's seven a near record

Ian McLean came within one goal of tying the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League single-game production record while helping Saanich Braves to a 15-1 romp over Juan de Fuca Gulls at Pearkes Arena.

McLean fired seven goals and clubmate Tracy Patterson added five while singles were contributed by Ron McKay, Bruce Tuck and Dan Brooks.

The league record of eight goals in a game was set two seasons ago by Wayne Larsen.

Ian Fraser replied for the Gulls.

Mike Spiteri and Scott Bumfrey combined to block 47 shots on the Juan de Fuca net in the penalty-filled contest while Marty Wakelyn made 22 saves for Saanich.

KO for Too Tall

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Ed (Too Tall) Jones knocked out Billie Joe Thomas at 2:28 of the fourth round Tuesday night to post his fifth win in as many heavyweight boxing bouts since retiring as a defensive lineman with Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League.

Minnie appeal hearing refused

Broadmead Farms Ltd. spokesman Merv Mawson said Tuesday the company is happy a lengthy court battle over controversial Minnie Mountain housing development appears to be over.

The Supreme Court of Canada on Tuesday refused to hear an appeal by Cadboro Bay Residents Association.

The association has been ordered to pay costs.

"It (the decision) was as we expected it to be," Mawson said.

He said the company felt confident the Supreme Court of Canada wouldn't overrule a unanimous decision of three B.C. Appeal Court judges.

Mawson said the first phase of the deluxe 210-unit development is already under way and sales should take place in about a year.

Saanich mayor Mel Couvelier said he was relieved to hear of the decision and that it will clear the way for full-scale work at the Ten Mile Point site.

Meanwhile, CBRA president Dick Boss said the association is disappointed but not ready to give up. Other legal means of halting the development have yet to be explored, he said.

Boss said the association executive will meet lawyer Laurence Fast next week to discuss alternatives.

The association was attempting to appeal a recent B.C. Appeal Court ruling overturning an earlier ruling by the B.C. Supreme Court quashing the 72-acre housing development bylaw.

Licence accord reached

Transportation ministers for Canada's 10 provinces and two territories have agreed on a common licence system for commercial vehicles.

The ministers, meeting in Victoria, agreed after two years of negotiations to proceed immediately to implement a common commercial vehicle licence reciprocity system, Transportation Minister Alex Fraser said Tuesday.

He said this means trucking companies and bus lines will be able to split their licence fees in each province or territory based on the number of kilometres they operate in each jurisdiction.

He said the reciprocity plan will be formally signed and ratified at a conference in Toronto in September. Target date for the new system is April 1, 1981.

"The agreement will enable the trucking industry to operate more economically by eliminating some duplication of licence fees in each jurisdiction," Fraser said.

Delegates also unanimously agreed to press the federal government to re-introduce Bill C-25, a bill dealing with the transport of dangerous goods, as soon as possible after the Feb. 18 election.

Glenshiel repair vows unkept: MLA

Repairs to the Glenshiel Hotel promised three years ago still haven't been done, Victoria NDP MLA Gordon Hanson said today.

Plaster is falling off the ceiling, the roof leaks and the government-owned building at 606 Douglas is generally deteriorating, he said.

He has urged Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe to take responsibility for improvements promised after the government assured the 60 elderly residents their hotel would not be demolished.

But the years have slipped by without major repairs and maintenance, Hanson said.

"Enough's enough. I've asked the government to put the money in and fix it. It's not going to be torn down, so let's put some money in and maintain it properly."

Plaster patching has started, which should set the pattern for additional work, he suggested.

The situation was drawn to Hanson's attention, giving him impetus to take up the cause on behalf of the residents who are mostly pretty happy with the accommodation.

"It's a residential hotel, not an institution; an amalgam of homes."

But Hanson said wonders could be done by patching the plaster in corridors, repainting the leaky roof, repainting and laying new carpets. He said chunks of plaster fell during the last heavy rain.

"It was built at the same time as The Empress, an elegant building with a lot of privacy, but it simply needs a good paint job, rugs and the roof fixed up."

Hanson said part of the problem is the unusual management and financing arrangements. The hotel is leased for $1 a year to the highways department and run by a board of four civil servants from that ministry who have no direct access to funds.

Cash for repairs, for instance, must come out of the highways budget, or some other ministerial account, or else be granted directly by the treasury board, the MLA said.

Hotel manager Bert Hanson (no relation to the MLA) has been told necessary work will be done as soon as possible this summer, but the MLA said a more definite commitment is needed.

Transit financing worries mayor

Saanich mayor Mel Couvelier is concerned about a growing conviction among some Capital Regional District directors that a higher property tax is the fairest way to subsidize public transit.

The regional board earlier had considered a three-cents-a-gallon surcharge on gasoline as the first step in covering the deficit.

Couvelier, a member of the Urban Transit Authority, said the feeling that deficits should be covered by increased property taxes had been gathering momentum since November.

He said people in outlying areas wanted transit subsidized by property taxes because they don't go along with higher gasoline costs.

When the provincial government decided the region should take over transit on April 1, former municipal affairs minister Hugh Curtis said the deficits should first be covered by the gasoline surcharge, then an increase in Hydro rates and, finally, increased property taxes.

Couvelier said subsidies through property taxes would mean an increase of about two mills for Saanich.

"I just can't defend such a step," he said.

Schools have jazzy idea

More than 600 musicians — instrumental and vocal — will take part in the second annual Victoria Schools Jazz Festival Feb. 1-2 at the University of Victoria and Newcombe auditorium.

Band students and choirs from 30 schools in B.C. and two in Seattle will perform and take part in workshops and seminars.

A public concert presenting stage bands and jazz choirs will feature the Soundsations, a vocal jazz choir from Edmonds Community College, Wash., at 8 p.m. Feb. 2 in the University Centre auditorium.

The event grew from a festival involving 15 Victoria schools launched last year with help from Greater Victoria School District and the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association.

Its goal is to improve school music and promote quality jazz education.

The sponsors are the Victoria Music Teachers Association, the UVic music education department and Lansdowne Junior Secondary School.

The Soundsations have performed at Montreaux Festival, in the northwestern U.S. and Canada and have been acclaimed for their gospel, spiritual, rock, soul, disco, swing and popular music repertoire.

Nine Victoria schools are represented in the festival, along with the UVic jazz choir and schools in Nanaimo, Parksville, Vancouver and North Vancouver.

Poison list check

NELSON (CP) — RCMP are looking at drug store poison registers in their search someone who is poisoning dogs with strychnine and selling strychnine-laced LSD in this West Kootenay city. Five dogs have died since Christmas after eating poisoned meat, and a woman was taken to hospital during the weekend after taking the hallucinogen LSD cut with strychnine, the active ingredient in rat poison.

Baroque goings-on at UVic

Practically everybody knows what Noel Coward was talking about in the song, Mad Dogs and Englishmen. It's a little less clear what the phrase means when applied to a (more or less) serious music concert presented by the Victoria Conservatory of Music.

In fact the concert to be performed Friday by La Confrerie St.Julien, is dedicated to music written in England during the baroque era.

It will take place at Craigdarroch Castle, 1050 Joan Crescent at 8 p.m.

Foreign-born composers dominated the musical scene in England for much of the 18th century so the program includes works by the Italian Franceso Geminiani and the German Johann Froberger.

Included will be some of the rather bawdy catches, or rounds, which were popular in the late 17th century.

Performers will be Sydney Humphreys, violin; James Kennedy, baroque flute; Rory Hammond and Richard Margison, tenors, and Bryan Townsend, guitar.

Admission is $2.50; $1 for students and senior citizens.

Merchants twitchy over ferry inaction

The possibility that there will be no Victoria-Seattle ferry service this summer was raised Tuesday by realtor Pip Holmes.

President of the Downtown Business Association, Holmes told city council's central business district advisory committee that merchants fear a replacement for the Princess Marguerite won't be found in time.

The Maggie can still be used, he said, but unless it is in drydock by Feb. 1 for an extensive refit, there's no chance of her sailing this summer.

That would lead to abandonment of the service, probably never to be revived. Interruption of service would be "somewhat catastrophic" to the tourist industry, Holmes said.

He said he understood the 30-year-old ship needs sewage holding tanks to travel in U.S. waters and that the galley is condemned.

A group of civil servants has returned from Sweden emptyhanded after looking over possible replacements, and "it seems nothing is apparently happening down there," Holmes said, referring to Highways Minister Alex Fraser's continuing silence on the subject.

However, Chamber of Commerce president Cedric Steele said: "We've been assured there will be a ship."

As late as last week, Fraser told the chamber not to worry, Steele said. The chamber doesn't know where the vessel is coming from, but the Marguerite definitely sailed her last trip in 1979. Steele added that he thought the Marguerite could have been used for one more season.

Steele said the proposed lease arrangement for a Swedish ship would have cost $3 million a year and the Swedes wanted a minimum five-year agreement.

Older woman-younger man combo still taboo

HOLLYWOOD — All the world loves a lover, except, apparently, when the lover is a woman substantially older than the man in her life.

Society in most civilized countries accepts with amused tolerance the coupling of a withered old goat and a fresh young girl. Whether romantic fling or marriage, the older man-younger woman mating is more or less the norm.

Nor is notice taken when a woman is, say, a half-dozen years older than her mate. But let the age difference between a woman and her lover reach 15 or 20 years and note is taken, attention paid.

Society may not disapprove of these liaisons but such pairings remain sufficiently scarce to raise eyebrows, more so here than in Europe or Asia.

American advertising, movies and TV, in their own sexist ways, have created built-in obsolesence in females just as in automobiles and refrigerators. It's as if the American male is expected to get a new model every few years.

Hollywood is a prime proponent of nubile young women involved with mature males. The idealized female is young (in her 20s), most often blonde, slender, long-legged, full-bosomed and, of course, gorgeous.

She is also dispensible.

She is Raquel Welch for five years, to be replaced by Farrah Fawcett who gives way to Bo Derek who is made to understand her reign will be brief.

On the other hand, male symbols of sexual desirability are in their 40s and 50s — Clint Eastwood, Paul Newman, Robert Redford, Burt Reynolds.

Their leading ladies inevitably are many years their junior.

Hollywood's value system is a disillusioning, intolerable state of affairs for women in their 40s and 50s. Actresses — an occasional Jane Fonda provides the exception — are consigned to character roles as they approach the middle years.

It is, therefore, grist for the gossip mills when a prominent actress takes a younger lover as did Louise Fletcher (mid-40s) with Morgan Mason (early 20s) a couple of years ago. They have since gone their separate ways.

Less publicized than the Fletcher-Mason live-in arrangement is the eight-year love affair between Rachel Roberts, 52, and Beverly Hills fashion consultant Darren Ramirez, who is in his 30s.

Rachel, who divorced Rex Harrison nine years ago, starred in "Yanks" last year and may well qualify for an Oscar nomination playing the concerned mother of an English girl who has fallen in love with an American GI.

Rachel has been on both ends of the generation gap in intimate relationships. Harrison was almost 20 years her senior. Ramirez is some 15 years her junior.

"I felt the disparity more in my marriage to Rex," she said during a stop in Hollywood. "There were 20 of the dangerous years between us. Rex revisited many paths that were completely new to me — social situations as well as physical places that were familiar to him.

"I was 31 and he was 51 when we married. I was no longer a girl but I say 'dangerous' because a vital part of life exists for a woman between 30 and 50. I tended to lean on Rex a little too much.

"The 15-year difference in my relationship now makes me glad. It gives me something to work for. With luck, we grow older and wiser. I'm much more stable now. I can't put it into words, really.

"I have a tendency to lean on a man to fulfill my life. It's less of a struggle with an older man, a father figure.

"A younger man has his way to fight in the world, a reputation to make, an economic position to gain. He has yet to prove himself.

"There's a big difference in being with a younger man. You don't lean so much because it's not so easy for him to protect you from the big, bad wolf.

"It's more of an equal partnership financially and otherwise. I'm undeniably sybaritic and lazy and sometimes think I would like to chuck it all. But nothing is Utopia."

Rachel lives in New York, Ramirez in Beverly Hills. In the past year she has traveled to Australia, France and Italy working on screen, stage and TV. Ramirez joined her briefly in Europe.

Her peripatetic lifestyle and celebrity places a degree of stress on Rachel's relationship with her lover. So far she has managed to cope.

"It's not easy," she said. "He lives in California and I live wherever the curtain goes up or the cameras roll. Telephone calls don't make up for being apart. I'm tiring of it and so is he.

"Society is more critical of a mature woman involved with a young man. I think it goes back to the stereotype of the man being the breadwinner and the wife relying on him. The cave man theory is changing, but very slowly.

"Chronological age doesn't matter. I believe in late developers. Some people burn themselves out at 25. As long as one has the gift of health there's no reason why one should age emotionally and psychologically.

"Physical age is something else. I'm tired of pushing myself so hard. So I'm taking 14 weeks to conduct a class in Shakespearean acting at Yale."

Will Darren Ramirez be a part her life there? Rachel lifted her eyebrows and smiled.

Writers buy own work

TORONTO (CP) — Symbolizing the troubles of the writing and publishing community in Canada, some of the country's most famous authors banded together recently to buy their own books to save them from vanishing.

Farley Mowat, Margaret Laurence, Pierre Berton, Robertson Davies, Richard Rohmer and Margaret Atwood are just a few of the authors affected by a decision of the publishing firm of McClelland and Stewart to cut costs by cleaning out their warehouse.

The company's decision to get rid of slow-moving stock means that 179 books will disappear from circulation.

In order to preserve their works, the Writers Union and the League of Canadian Poets purchased 10 copies of the 179 books affected. Last week, they gathered to donate them to the University of Toronto in an atmosphere that was anything but happy.

Bacall feeling bushed after book tour grind

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Lauren Bacall left the Dinah Shore Show and dashed to the Beverly Hills Hotel to start packing for the flight to San Francisco. In between, she complained: "I can't talk about myself anymore; it's so boring."

But she will. Having made appearances for the paperback edition of her autobiography By Myself in Chicago, Detroit and Hollywood she faced San Francisco, Seattle, Washington, D.C., and New York.

"I've been home six weeks in the past year, and not all at one time," said the New York-based actress. "Mostly it has been for the book. I started with the hardcover in January and toured the United States. Then I flew to England, Scotland and Ireland for publication there. . . .

"I returned here to do the Rockford Files and on to Sweden and Italy. I picked places I had never been before, so that part of the tour was good. But it's so hard to talk about yourself all the time. You've got to keep your energy level up all the time. It's easy if the interviewers have read the book and can ask intelligent questions. But if they haven't and you get the same old movie-star questions, it's so dreary."

Despite her grumbles, Bacall admitted she was thrilled about the success of her autobiography 300,000 hardcover sales in the U.S. 1.5 million paperback in the first printing, with another on the way.

Does she have any regrets about anything she wrote in By Myself?

"No, not at all. I didn't want to hurt anyone with the book; there were no vendettas I wanted to settle. Not that I'm Miss Goodie Two-shoes. My friends know that."

She said she was looking forward to being able to stop promoting her book and begin acting again. But she was less happy with a forthcoming CBS movie about her life with Humphrey Bogart. The movie, she said, is disgusting and loathsome. She contemplated suing, but "that would take a million dollars, which I don't have.

"As Bogie used to say, 'actors are second class citizens.' Everyone who has wanted to make a buck off Bogart has done so. When it's done with imagination, as Woody Allen did in Play It Again, Sam, that's okay. But usually it's by some bum trying to get rich."

Regional parks budget increased by $72,315

The Capital Regional District's parks committee Tuesday approved a $609,670 budget for 1980 without parring a single item.

This represents a $72,315 increase over spending of $537,355 in 1979.

Directors were told by chairman Shirley Dowell that the Devonian Foundation of Calgary is donating 30 acres of park land in the Sherwood Pond area of Metchosin on William Head Road.

The area includes 500 feet of waterfront.

The foundation had bought 100 acres in the area for $925,000 and will give $200,000 toward the 30-acre park.

Lands, Parks and Housing Minister Jim Chabot has informed the regional district the provincial government will give the other $100,000 necessary to purchase the 30 acres.

Dowell told the commitee that the remaining acreage has been bought by a British family who want to settle in the area, thus eliminating the need to have the land removed from the Agricultural Land Reserve.

She said the foundation, a non-profit organization that provides funds for acquisition of parkland across Canada, has withdrawn its stipulation that an agreed amount of money be spent in development and maintenance of the park.

Its only stipulation now is that the park be maintained according to the standards of other parks in the regional district.

She also announced that the half-acre Reeson Park on the Wharf Street waterfront will be officially opened March 12.

A total of $6,330 was approved for maintenance of the park in 1980.

Dowell said Reeson Park is one reason the parks budget was increased.

Plans drafted by the landscape architect firm of Quayle-Gould had called for $176,400, plus $1,800 for construction supervision, in addition to $10,000 for consultant fees.

The land was given to the regional district some time ago by former Victoria mayor Peter Pollen and developer Gordon Reeson with the proviso that it be made into a park.

Executive director Dennis Young, however, said Tuesday that the regional district had contributed some $49,000 towards the purchase and the full debt charges would not be reflected in the 1980 budget.

It's just a dog's life

McBRIDE (CP) — This small central Interior village is going to the dogs.

Dogs are running loose and attacking residents on village streets and the obvious solution — hiring a dog catcher — won't work because nobody wants the job.

"You are a meanie if you pick up a dog," said deputy village clerk Ron Brown. " A person who does this in a small community is going to become very, very friendless."

Brown, whose son still carries scars on his face from a dog attack 15 years ago, said four people were attacked by dogs on the street recently.

The part-time dog-catcher position pays well — $15 for every dog taken — but the social ostracism was just too much for the four people who have held the job in the past six years.

At least two of them received anonymous threats of violence before they resigned.

The village tried to solve its problem by offering $15 to anyone who brought a live dog into the pound.

"But all this did was get kids bringing in the easy-to-catch little dogs that don't hurt anyone," said Brown. "No one brought in the big dogs that are the real problem and hard to catch."

Brown said McBride dogs are fast learners who quickly learn to recognize new dog-catchers' trucks and head to the hills when they see them coming.

McBride officials have written to Prince George and other communities for advice and are considering sending a questionnaire to the 800 residents for their suggestions.

$100,000 bribe bid to Nielsen: Crown

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two men conspired to offer a provincial cabinet minister $100,000 as a bribe for releasing land from B.C.'s agricultural land reserve, a Crown prosecutor said Tuesday in county court.

Prosecutor John Hall said that former radio openliner Ed Murphy and Vancouver businessman Douglas Holme conspired to offer a bribe to former Environment Minister Jim Nielsen.

Hall gave the court brief details during a pretrial motions in which defence lawyers submitted that the indictment against the two is not correctly worded.

The prosecutor said in replying to a defence submission that full particulars of the offences have not been given to the accused because all details were disclosed at the earlier preliminary hearing. Publication of evidence at that time was banned by the court.

Settlement first

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — The Nishga Tribal Council says it will not allow mining to begin at the Amax molybdenum mine on council land at Kitsault until all Nishga land claims have been settled.

"We intend to stop that mine," said council president James Gosnell. "We will not at this time say how this will be done but one way or another that mine will definitely not start up until our land claims are settled."

b.c. briefs

Delay sought

SEATTLE (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission wants a delay of a year or more in any further licensing proceedings for the proposed Skagit nuclear plants, Ricard Black, staff lawyer, said Tuesday. The delay is needed for further study of seismic and other geologic considerations near Sedro Woolley, Wash., where Puget Sound Power and Light Co. wants to build the plants, Black said.

Order upheld

VANCOUVER (CP) — A B.C. Appeals Court judge has ruled that a water bomber operation was within its rights in ordering one of its pilots to retire on reaching his 60th birthday. Thomas Kellough had claimed that Forest Industries Flying Tankers Ltd. of Sproat Lake violated the provincial Human Rights Code's age discrimination coverage.

Radioactive test

VANCOUVER (CP) — Wanted: Radioactive moose. Reply: B.C. health ministry. The ministry hasn't placed such an advertisement yet, but it has passed the word. Dr. Wayne Greene, director of the provincial government's radiation protection division, told the royal commission into uranium mining he's asked a member of the Atlin Community Association to send some moose meat. Greene told the intrigued public hearing that analysing moose is part of additional investigations by his division into the extent of uranium effects around the Atlin region in northwestern B.C.

Value doubles

The value of the cereal, forage and oilseed crops in the Peace River region of the province will total an estimated $68.5 million — about double that of the previous year, the agriculture ministry says.

Two children, dad die in fire

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Tomishi Suto died in hospital in Vancouver today from burns suffered in a fire in which two of his seven children perished early Tuesday.

Ronnie, 18, and Laurie, 6, were killed in a blaze which destroyed their two-storey home in this Vancouver suburb.

Their mother, Leona Suto, was in fair condition in the burn unit at Vancouver General Hospital. Three children were reported in satisfactory condition in hospital in New Westminster while two other children escaped serious injury.

The parents apparently were burned when they attempted to get back inside the house to rescue their children.

The fire is believed to have started near a wood stove in a hallway.

Faster action on spills eyed

Environment Minister Steve Rogers said Tuesday he is considering a change to the Emergency Programs Act which would give him power to take immediate action in cases of pollution disaster.

Rogers noted that the act can only be invoked by cabinet order, and suggested that should be changed so that the minister responsible can declare an emergency.

"Sometimes you have to order people to work and order them to do what is necessary," he said.

Rogers suggested the minister then would be accountable to the cabinet and ultimately to the legislature.

Last week, President Carter endorsed a plan by the Northern Tier Pipeline Co. of Seattle that would increase shipments of Alaskan oil into the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

Currently 25 oil tankers pass through the area each month to existing refineries.

The Northern Tier proposal would see much larger volumes of oil moved, but the use of supertankers would allow the actual number of ships involved to remain about the same.

Rogers' proposal came after a senior civil servant in Ottawa suggested B.C.'s coast can be adequately protected against oil spills.

Jacques Gerin, senior assistant deputy environment minister, said Tuesday in Ottawa that existing international agreements and future contingency plans should provide adequate protection for the West Coast against the danger of new spills from any increased tanker traffic.

Gerin said the idea of the Americans moving Alaskan oil by ship to Washington State and then by pipeline to the U.S. is no surprise.

He said studies have been conducted on West Coast tanker traffic since 1977.

Rogers said earlier this week B.C. would be able to do little in the event of a major spill involving a supertanker.

"What would they (the federal government) do if there was a major spill? Parachute in the army?" asked Rogers.

Deputy environment minister Ben Marr said Tuesday while Canada has the equipment and techniques, if a 500,000 ton tanker were to break up, no one is in a position to cope with that size of a spill.

"We're not criticizimg the Canadian readiness," Marr said.

"We're just saying that we're no better than any other nation when it comes to coping with a major spill in a satisfactory manner."

The U.S. government claims a proposed "hook-up" facility at Port Angeles, Wash., across the strait from Victoria would reduce most of the danger of an oil spill.

This means most of the oil would be unloaded at Port Angeles and moved by pipe from there, thus eliminating some existing tanker movement in eastern portions of the strait.

Scientists studying the possibility of spills on the West Coast say the hook-up would reduce risk of damage to valuable salmon fishing and rearing grounds.

The U.S. government provided in 1976 a $100-million liability and compensation fund for victims of an oil spill, including Canadians, the external affairs department says.

Congress now is considering a bill to increase the fund to $200 million.

A transport spokesman said the revisions will partly take into account an extension of Canada's territorial waters to 200 miles from 12 miles.

Meanwhile, experts say a solid framework designed to keep the West Coast free of massive pollution spills is slowly emerging following several years of negotiations with the U.S.

Gerin and fisheries spokesmen say the most practical and significant bilateral agreement with the U.S. to date is a vessel traffic management agreement signed last December.

The agreement was designed to develop more sophisticated navigational systems.

WARNING

PROTECT YOUR FAMILY FROM CARBON MONOXIDE POISONING!

Carbon monoxide poisoning is a very real hazard in many homes throughout British Columbia. This odorless, invisible killer is produced when combustion takes place without a proper supply of air. With the recent drive to conserve heat and energy, many homes have been made much more air-tight, and with the combination of a burning fireplace, a gas-burning furnace and the normal compliment of appliances and exhaust fans in operation, a potentially lethal situation can occur. Gas furnaces normally have their own air supply, however, it is often not of sufficient size to supply the additional air demands of fireplaces and exhaust fans. A fireplace should have its own air supply duct or a window should be opened in the room where a fireplace is being used. Don't take chances—learn about the hazards of carbon monoxide . . . have a qualified heating expert check your home for its air supply needs.

If further information is required contact your local Gas Safety Inspector.

When Pete Hollstein limped into Vancouver provincial court with fresh beard and confused expression after spending a day in a police cell, he said: "I don't even know what I'm here for but I plead guilty." Judge John Davies asked for a transcript of the statement for his personal collection. Hollstein, 57, was told of the charges against him: drinking in a public place, jaywalking and a string of charges for failing to appear in court. Davies refused to accept the plea, the prosecutor called no evidence, the charge was dismissed and Hollstein limped out of court.

Dear Abby:

I am writing about a problem that is perplexing to me. My husband is absolutely perfect in every respect except for one habit that I cannot seem to break him of:

Instead of throwing out empty food containers after he has emptied them, he puts them back in the refrigerator! I can't begin to tell you how many empty cartons, bottles and cans I have found in the refrigerator.

No amount of scolding, pleading or nagging seems to help.

He offers no explanation for this screwball behavior. I think he's too lazy to walk to the trash can on the other side of the kitchen.

Frustrated

Dear Frustrated:

You're crying with a loaf of bread under each arm and an empty ketchup bottle in the refrigerator. If a man must have but one flaw in an otherwise flawless character, I can think of none so harmless, inoffensive and easy to forgive as your husband's.

Dear Abby:

My problem may be unusual, but no more so than some of your other mail.

I am a mature young woman, and my problem concerns my height. I am 5 foot 4 inches and very slim. I would normally be quite happy with my height, but my dream has always been to be a top-notch fashion model, and I need to be 4 or 5 inches taller to qualify.

Do you know of a doctor who would be willing to give me hormone shots to make me grow? If so, I would also like to know about possible side effects, fees, etc.

I respect your advice, and trust your judgment.

East Coast Model

Dear Model:

I consulted an endocrinologist. He replied, "If she is a normal, healthy, fully-developed young woman, hormone shots would not help. And no ethical physician would treat her with the promise of adding to her height."

Dear Abby:

My husband and I are not up on all the social graces, and we want to know what is proper.

When a man and woman are seated and an elderly lady approaches them and introduces herself, are both the man and woman supposed to stand? Or just the man? What if the elderly person were a man?

No Names, Please

Dear No Names:

When an elderly person of either sex approaches a younger couple, both the man and the woman should stand — out of respect to age, not sex.

Stephen Yan during Ida Clarkson television taping in Victoria Tuesday ends up enjoying his own cooking

Yan's served up with corn

By LON WOOD

Stephen Yan — the name almost rhymes with ham. And for any one of his growing horde of fans, it's not a bad comparison.

Sundays at 5:30 p.m. on BCTV Channels 6 and 8 Yan serves up his showmanship with a dash of soy — and more than just a little corn.

But bad (or good) puns aside, Yan's Woking also teaches fast and fun methods of preparing Chinese food in the home.

This week he is in Victoria to give public demonstrations at The Bay — at noon, 1 p.m., 2 p.m., 7 p.m. and 8 p.m. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, and Saturday at 11:30 a.m., 12:30 p.m., 1:30 p.m., 2:30 p.m and 3:30 p.m. — all in the housewares department on the third floor.

While in Victoria, the wok-wielding Yan will also appear Thursday on CHEK-TV Channel 6 at 12:15 p.m. on the Ida Clarkson Show.

Born and raised in Hong Kong, Yan has been cooking since the age of 10 and came to B.C. in 1965 via Tokyo and Portland.

He is as enterprising as he is entertaining. Besides Yan's Woking, taped before a live audience, he is president of Yan's Variety Co. Ltd., a manufacturer of Chinese cookware and condiments. He also owns Yan's Chinese Restaurant in Burnaby and has written cookbooks including Chinese Recipes which is the textbook for night school courses he has taught to hundreds in Vancouver.

His message is consistent; Chinese cooking is economical as well as quick and easy to prepare.

From Chinese Recipes, some samples:

SWEET/SOUR PORK

An outstandingly colourful and delightful dish that is so famous and welcome by people all over the world.

1 pound pork, boneless butts or steaks cut into 1" cubes.
1 tablespoonful light soy sauce
Drops Sesame oil
½ teaspoonful Salt

Batter mix:

1 beaten egg with dash of salt
1 cup Flour
¼ teaspoonful baking powder
¾ to 1 cup water
1 cup Pineapple chunks
1 carrot piece, skinned and thinly sliced
1 large green pepper, cut into squares of 1" sizes.
⅓ cup vinegar
¾ cup sugar
2 tablespoons of tapioca starch
½ small can of tomato paste.

Marinate pork with light soy sauce, sesame oil, and salt for 15 minutes.

Mix batter into a thick paste, then dip pork in and put into hot oil. Deep fry all porks until golden brown in colour. Remove from oil and drain.

Use the wok and high heat to make the sauce with vinegar, sugar, starch, tomato paste and 1 cup of water. Stir constantly until cooked. Add all vegetables and pork to wok. Mix and serve hot.

CHICKEN BALLS WITH PINEAPPLE

2 deboned chicken breats cut into 1" cubes.
1 tablespoonful of Chinese cooking wine.
2 tablespoons light soy sauce.
Drops Sesame Oil
½ cup pineapple chunks
1 tablespoon tapioca starch
1 tablespoon vinegar
3 tablespoon sugar
1 small, green pepper, cut into small squares

Batter mix:

See recipe on sweet and sour pork.

Marinate chicken cubes with wine, light soy sauce and sesame oil for 10 minutes.

Prepare batter mix in a bowl. Dip chicken in batter mix and deep fry in hot oil for 5 minutes.

While waiting, use a saucepan to prepare sauce with tapioca starch, ¾ cup water, vinegar, sugar. Bring to a boil, then add pineapple, green pepper and chicken cubes. Mix well and serve hot.

N.B. For better results, pineapple juice can be used instead of water when making the sauce.

BLACK BEAN SAUCE BEEF CHOW MEIN

This is a very popular dish in Chinese restaurants for Chinese people. The beef is cooked with spicy black bean sauce, with an authentic smell and taste. Salted black beans usually sold in small plastic bags or in cans and are available in Chinese specialty shops.

½ pound beef, flank steaks, sliced thinly across grain
½ cup salted black beans rinsed and drained.
2 garlic cloves, crushed and skinned.
1 medium onion, shredded
1 tablespoon tapioca starch
1-2 tablespoons light soy sauce
Pinch Pepper
1 medium green pepper, cut into small squares
1 teaspoon sugar
Drops Sesame oil
½ to 1 pound Chow Mein noodles

Prepare chow mein noodles as directed on package.

Marinate beef with pepper, starch, light soy sauce, sugar and sesame oil.

With hot wok, put in 3 tablespoonful of oil until hot. Put in garlic, black beans, onions and green pepper to brown for a minute. Then add beef to stir fry until the colour of meat changed. Add starch solution with starch, light soy sauce and ½ cup of water Bring to a boil and pour on top of chow mein noodles. Mix and serve.

Frostbite can cause long suffering

By DR. L. L. COLEMAN

Frostbite is the unhappy result of overexposure to freezing temperatures. Despite warnings and health campaigns, many people pay for carelessness with long disability.

Simple precautions can prevent the long and painful illness and incapacitation that results from overexposure. The key to prevention of complications of fristbite is its earliest recognition.

Frostbite is caused by a decreased amount of blood and oxygen to the tips of the fingers, the toes, the ear lobes, the nose and the cheeks. A pins-and-needles sensation, with numbness and a distinct pallor, occurs at the very beginning of frostbite. Later, the blanched skin begins to turn a bluish or purplish red.

Frostbite is preventable. Warm clothing, preferably in several layers that do not bind the body or the extremities tightly, dry insulated gloves, socks and waterproof shoes are all essential to anyone who, at work or at play, is exposed to sub-zero weather.

All clothing and shoes must be a little loose, so that they do not close off the blood vessels by pressure and constriction.

Contrary to general understanding, it takes remarkably little exposure to cold and wind to affect the blood supply to the extremities.

If frostbite is suspected,the victim should be brought into a warm room to allow gentle thawing. Immerse the frostbitten area in tepid water. Do not rub or massage the frozen part of the body too vigorously. This may break the delicate skin and expose it to infection.

Under no circumstances should there be an application of ice and snow to the frozen part. This technique has no medical justification and is, in fact, extremely hazardous.

Remember, too, that the frostbitten leg or arm is far less sensitive than a normal one. Extreme heat is not felt. The application of hot water bags or heating pads may cause severe burn and damage to the underlying tissue.

A physician's direction, if only by telephone, is imperative. Antibiotics, anticoagulants and other drugs can be extremely helpful in preventing the disastrous complications of frostbite.

Sensible anticipation by workers, hunters and skiers of the possibility of sudden changes in temperature can avoid the misery of frostbite.

Speaking of your health ... emotional exhaustion must always be considered in the understanding of extreme body fatigue.

Dr. Coleman welcomes letters from his readers. Personal replies, however, are not possible, and only letters of broadest interest will be published. Write Dr. L.L. Coleman, c/o The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N4.

"They won't come near me since I gave them some of my wife's homemade cake."

Put on the skillet. . .

hilda beastall

Pancakes with flavorful and healthful fillings in place of oversweet sauces are good food for quick lunches or suppers. Good too for all ages and quickly made for one person or for a family of six. For the latter, two skillet or frypans would have the meal ready for everyone at the same time.

These ideas are useful when odds and ends of cooked rice, macaroni, meat, fish, or almost any kind of vegetable are already in the refrigerator.

Fresh vegetables are equally quick in preparation as will be seen.

SAVORY PANCAKES
45 mL soy flour
45 mL millet flour
15 mL wheat germ
15 mL torula yeast
2 mL baking powder
1 mL salt
75 mL powdered skim milk
175 mL water
1 small egg
250 mL mashed cooked vegetables

Measure and mix dry ingredients in bowl.

Beat egg in another bowl, add water and mashed vegetables. Mix in well.

Add moist ingredients to dry, just to blend.

Spoon half mixture into lightly greased skillet or frypan.

Cook gently one side. Divide into four portions. Turn; brown second side half length of time for first side.

Repeat for second half of mixture. Will serve 4.

This same basic recipe can be changed by adding one cup of shredded raw cabbage or Swiss chard, or raw broccoli. These three vegetables may still be in sheltered local gardens in spite of recent snow and other winter conditions. They are a real treat when available. Cut them fine so they cook in the pancake steam during the five to seven minutes of browning.

Breakfast Hotcakes with fruit, and Lunch Fritters with vegetables can both be produced within minutes from another basic recipe.

FRITTERS
125 mL whole wheat flour
125 mL unbleached flour
5 mL baking powder
250 mL milk from skim powder
1 mL salt
2 small eggs, slightly beaten soft margarine for greasing pan

Sift flours with baking powder and salt into bowl.

Mix eggs into milk; add to dry ingredients, mixing only to blend. Mixture should still be lumpy.

For Fruit Hotcakes: grease large frypan lightly with margarine. Place 4 thin banana slices in 5 or 6 groups around pan; spoon batter over each group. Cook about one minute, lifting edges with spatula to keep from sticking. Turn, lifting banana slices with each Hotcake.

Cook second side briefly. Makes about 12 hotcakes to serve 4.

To Make Apple Hotcakes: peel (if from winter storage) and slice thinly, treating in same way as banana above.

If preferred, fresh fruit may be sliced and put between two hotcakes without cooking fruit. Many people will like this.

For Lunch Fritters: with fresh vegetables, choose carrots, Jerusalem artichokes, parsnips, well flavored sweet winter squash, or yellow turnip that you know has a good flavor and texture.

Clean the chosen vegetable well by scrubbing; the squash and turnip needs peeling with swivel blade paring knife.

Slice thinly enough pieces to cover bottom of large skillet or frypan with single layer. Add enough hot water to barely cover vegetable. Cover with lid; bring to boil and let simmer gently until fork tender and water almost evaporated.

Meanwhile prepare the Fritter mixture from above recipe.

Add about 5 mL soft margarine in tiny bits over the vegetables.

Spoon batter over vegetables and cook for about three minutes or until puffy and set. Lift edges frequently to prevent sticking.

Divide into 4 portions. Serve upside down, sprinkled with finely chopped parsley or chives according to taste.

These also serve 4.

From these two recipes for Pancakes and Fritters will come many ideas of your own. The main theme is to keep these quick meals as nutritious and satisfying as possible by cooking for a minimum of time and with a minimum of fat even though in a frypan.

Another week I can give you a time-saving home-made Biscuit Mix recipe which when made up in quantity can be stored in a covered container in refrigerator. It can be used for making not only Biscuits, butalso Hermits, Pie Crusts, Savory Biscuit Wedges, and Fritters and Pancakes.

For some of these an egg, or cut fruit are added, and varying amounts of water. A truly handy mix to have ready, especially for older folks who don't like a long session of baking, this is a time-saver.

FLAT PANCAKES can be lifted into higher tastes and nutrition brackets when you steer away from the conventional and try new fillings, savory as well as sweet. Here, for enjoyment by young pancake fanciers, is a tasty but plain pancake mix that serves better use when layered with cottage cheese and flavored with the natural juice from tins of sugarless fruit.

Tip on taffy

DRESDEN, Ont. (CP) — The secret of taffy-making is to avoid stirring while it cooks or it will sugar, says Mrs. Stanley Johnston, 83. She has made taffy most of her life, but now needs help to pull the candy because of arthritis in her hands.

Fast food at home

By KAY SPICER

Many times you must prepare a satisfying menu on short notice.

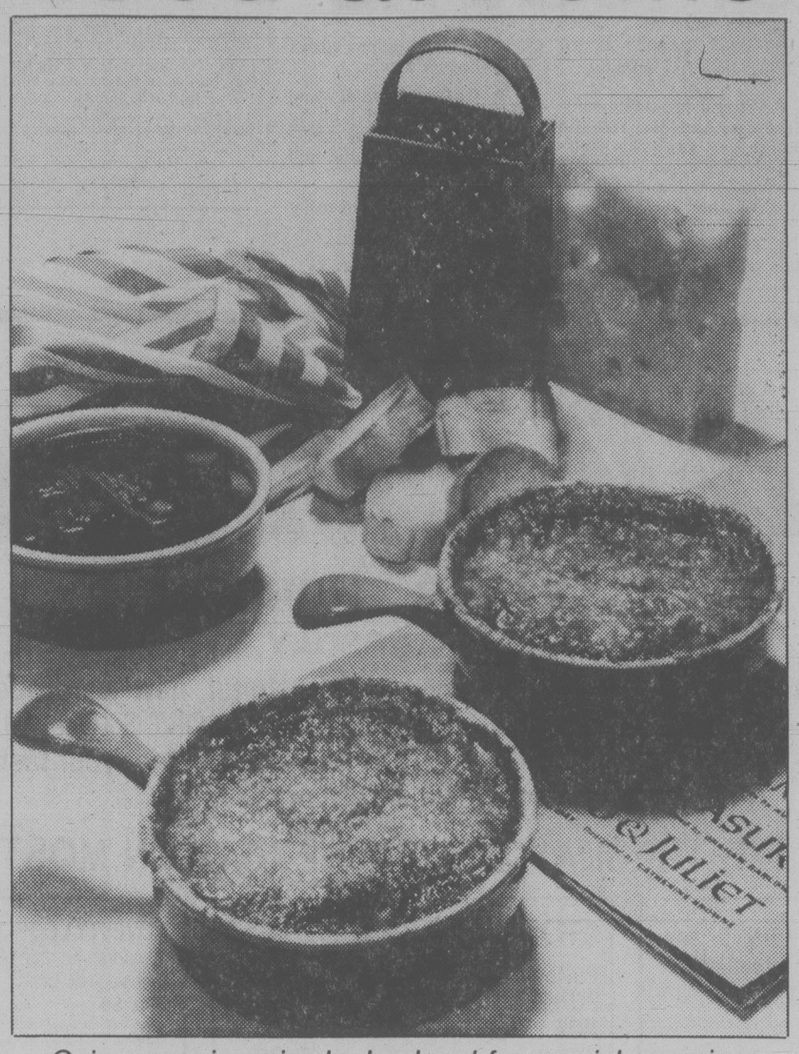
Just consider the prerequisites for any brunch, lunch or supper dish. They should be quick and easy to prepare, satisfying but not too rich, yet packed with good nutrition.

Today we have three good samples to fill the bill.

When your family requires such a meal, choose a Ham and Onion Quiche, a savory cheese, egg, ham and onion mixture in a tender pastry case.

Onion Soup is a warm and hearty do-ahead for simple or special occasions.

Pizza Loaf is a satisfying sandwich which packs lots of flavor. Serve this to hungry children.



Onion soup is a simple do-ahead for special occasions

HAM QUICHE
Makes 4 to 6 servings

1 (9-inch) pie shell, partially baked
2 pounds onions, thinly sliced
¼ cup vegetable oil
1½ tablespoons flour
1 cup chopped cooked ham
2 eggs
⅔ cup milk
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
Pinch nutmeg
½ cup grated Swiss or Cheddar cheese.

Cook onions in vegetable oil over medium heat, stirring occasionally, about 40 minutes. Sprinkle with flour, mix well and cook slowly for 2 to 3 minutes. Stir in chopped ham. Allow to cool slightly. Beat egg yolks, milk and seasoning until well blended. Mix in onion mixture and one-half the cheese. Pour mixture in a partially baked pie shell. Sprinkle remaining cheese over top. Bake in 375°F oven 25 to 30 minutes or until Quiche has puffed and browned.

FRENCH ONION SOUP

⅓ cup vegetable oil
2 pounds onions, thinly sliced (about 7 cups)
¼ cup corn starch
10 cups beef stock or beef and chicken stock combined
Salt and pepper
1 package Holland rusks or 8-10 1-inch slices French bread
8 ounces Mozzarella cheese, grated
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese.

Cook onions uncovered in vegetable oil over medium heat about 40 minutes; do not brown. Stir corn starch into onions and cook for 2 to 3 minutes. Remove from heat. Heat stock in a 4-5 quart saucepan and add onions. Cover partially and simmer for 30 to 40 minutes skimming froth as it appears. Add salt and pepper to taste. Soup may be refrigerated up to 1 week or used immediately.

To serve soup gratinee: Place rusks or bread in an ovenproof casserole or individual soup bowls. Ladle soup over rusks until they are covered. Cover generously with Mozzarella and Parmesan cheese. Bake in 375°F oven 10 to 20 minutes or until cheese is bubbly and brown.

PIZZA LOAF
Makes 4 to 6 servings

1 pound medium ground beef
1 can (7½-ounce) tomato sauce
1 medium onion, finely chopped
¼ cup dry crumbs
¼ cup chopped olives
½ teaspoon oregano
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 15-inch loaf French bread
4 processed cheese slices cut in half
1 tomato, sliced

Mix together ground beef, tomato sauce, onion, crumbs, olives, oregano, salt and pepper. Cut loaf in half lengthwise; spread meat mixture on both halves. Broil for 10 to 12 minutes or until meat is cooked. Arrange cheese slices and tomato on top of meat; broil about 1 minute until cheese softens. Cut into diagonal slices and serve hot.

craig claiborne

In an article on the cooking of Spain, I outlined in considerable detail the recipes of perhaps the best "Spanish" cook I know, Penelope Casas.

Much of the article had to do with the fact that there are at least three kinds of gazpachos in Spain, but only one is well-known to the American table, the one made with tomatoes, cucumbers, garlic and oil. Mention was made of another gazpacho called ajo blanco con uvas, this one containing white grapes and almonds.

A host of readers wrote to ask if I could print that recipe. I asked Mrs. Casas and she volunteered the following, a white gazpacho with grapes:

AJO BLANCO con UVAS
4 ounces blanched almonds
2 cloves garlic, peeled
1 teaspoon salt
4 slices day-old bread
6 tablespoons olive oil
3 tablespoons red wine vinegar
4 cups ice water
Croutons
Seedless grapes, peeled, about eight per portion (see note).

1. Blend the almonds, garlic and salt in an electric blender or food processor until the almonds are very finely ground.

2. Soak the bread in cold water. Squeeze to extract most of the moisture.

3. With the motor of the blender running, gradually add the bread. Add the oil, pouring it in a thin stream, then the vinegar. Scrape the bowl occasionally with a rubber spatula.

4. Beat in one cup of the water. Transfer the soup to a large bowl. Stir in the remaining three cups of water. Add more salt and vinegar if desired.

5. Chill. Serve very cold garnished with croutons and the grapes.

Yield: 6 servings.

Note: The grapes are not merely decorative; they are essential to the soup's flavor.

Recently someone asked about a recipe for oyster stew with teaberries as an ingredient. I replied that I had never heard of such a recipe and knew nothing about teaberries, presuming that they were the fruit of the tea plant. Numerous readers, in return, wrote to state that teaberries are quite common.

"When I was a boy in southern New Jersey," Jack Meyer wrote, "a plant grew wild in the woods which was called, at least locally, teaberry.

"It had nothing to do with the tea we brew tea from. I never heard of a use for it in cooking, but when walking through the woods, the berries, and even more so the leaves, were very refreshing to chew.

"If I remember right, the berries were quite small and red. The leaves were a smooth, dark, shiny green," Meyer wrote.

On reading the letter, memories of my childhood came flooding back and I recalled my absolutely favorite chewing gum was called teaberry.

Swimming lesson for cooks

the 60-minute gourmet

One of the great categories of French food is that called "a la nage." This curious culinary expression literally means "in the swim" and refers to the fact that a fish or some kind of seafood is "swimming" in a flavorful, rich, buttery broth. This liquid is really a court bouillon with a good number of aromatics to its credit. Whether viewed as a soup or boiled seafood, the "la nage" dishes detailed here can be used as appetizers or as a luncheon main course.

COQUILLE ST. JACQUES A LA NAGE
(Scallops and vegetables in court bouillon)

1 pint fresh bay scallops or sea scallops cut in half
1 small onion
2 ribs heart of celery
1 small carrot
4 sprigs fresh parsley
4 tablespoons butter
½ cup thinly sliced leeks
½ bay leaf
Salt and freshly ground pepper
½ cup dry white wine
½ cup heavy cream
Pinch cayenne pepper.

1. Pick over the scallops, if necessary, to remove any bits of shell.

2. Peel the onion and cut it in half lengthwise. Cut each half crosswise into very thin slices. There should be about half a cup. Set aside.

3. Trim the celery ribs and cut them crosswise into eight-inch slices. Set aside.

4. Trim and scrape the carrot. Use a lemon peeler to make lengthwise ridges around the carrot. Cut the carrot into thin rounds. Set aside.

5. Pluck off bits of parsley leaves from each sprig. There should be about half a cup. Set aside.

6. Melt two tablespoons butter in a small skillet and add the onion, celery, carrot, leeks, bay leaf, salt and pepper to taste. Cook, stirring often, until the vegetables are tender. Do not brown. The vegetables must remain a bit crisp.

7. Add the wine and cook until the wine is reduced almost by half.

8. Add the cream and cook until the cream is reduced by half. Add the scallops and more freshly ground pepper to taste. Add the cayenne. Cook over high heat about one and a half minutes, stirring often. The scallops should barely cook, but they should not be raw.

9. Add the parsley bits. Swirl in the remaining butter and serve.

Yield: Four servings.

HOMARD A LA NAGE
(Lobster and vegetables in court bouillon)

1 small onion
2 ribs heart of celery
1 small carrot
1 cup thinly sliced green part of leeks
½ cup coarsely chopped onion
½ cup coarsely chopped celery
½ cup coarsely chopped carrot
2 cups water
1 cup dry white wine
½ teaspoon dried thyme
1 bay leaf
6 sprigs fresh parsley
6 peppercorns, crushed
Salt to taste
2 one-and-one-half-pound lobsters
2 tablespoons butter.

1. Peel the onion and cut it lengthwise in half. Cut each half crosswise into very thin slices. There should be about half a cup. Set aside.

2. Trim the celery ribs and cut them crosswise into one-eighth-inch slices. Set aside.

3. Trim and peel the carrot. Use a lemon peeler to make lengthwise ridges around the carrot. Cut the carrot into thin rounds. Set aside.

4. Combine in a large kettle half of the leeks, the coarsely chopped onion, coarsely chopped celery, coarsely chopped carrot, water, wine, thyme, bay leaf, two parsley sprigs, peppercorns and salt. Cover and bring to the boil. Simmer 15 minutes.

5. Add the lobsters and cover closely. Cook exactly seven minutes.

6. Remove the lobsters. Strain the cooking liquid. Discard the solids.

7. Put the thinly sliced onion, celery slices and carrot rings in a saucepan. Add the remaining leeks. Add the strained cooking liquid. Bring to the boil and cook over high heat until the vegetables are tender but still crisp, about five minutes.

8. Split the lobsters in half. Remove and discard the tough sac near the eyes. Crack the claws. Arrange one lobster half and one claw in a soup bowl.

9. Pluck off enough small bits of parsley leaves from each of the remaining sprigs to make half a cup.

10. To the vegetables and liquid add the butter bit by bit, swirling it into the sauce. Cook about one minute. Add the parsley bits.

11. Pour the sauce over the lobster and serve hot.

Yield: Four servings.

Use This Home Recipe Plan to Lose Ugly Fat

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of bulky unsightly fat right in your own home. Use this recipe plan yourself. It's easy—no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full twice a day and follow the Naran plan.

If your first purchase does not show you the simple, easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't seem to disappear almost like magic from neck, chin, arms, bust, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow the easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Stovetop cooking cheaper

OTTAWA (CP) — Cooking on the surface unit of your kitchen range is more efficient than using the oven, says Agriculture Canada.

Tests have shown, for example, that two servings of pork chops cooked on the element required almost 85 per cent less energy than when baked in the oven.

Similar results were found when the tests were done on a complete six-serving meal of pork chops, potatoes, carrots and whole stuffed apples. Cooking the entire meal on the surface unit consumed about 60 per cent less energy than when using the oven, and about 72 per cent less than when combining the surface unit and the oven.

Generally, the consultants say, the quickest cooking method is also the most energy-saving. Choose methods that take one hour or less and use only one element at a time.

Cast iron heats more slowly but holds the heat well. The most efficient pot is one that has a flat bottom, with a dark or dull finish.

Tomatoes Italiano good meat partner

Main course vegetables ease costs

A delicious variety of thrifty main dishes are as close as your store's produce section! Many fresh winter vegetables, such as tomatoes, peppers, cucumbers, peppers, and eggplants are imported during the winter from sunny Mexico, the land where tomatoes originated. As a result of nearly ideal growing conditions this season, the quality of winter produce is at an all-time high.

To help stretch the family food dollar, try featuring the following tomato dish as an economical meat partner.

TOMATOES ITALIANO

- 4 large tomatoes
- ½ cup chopped onion
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1½ to 2 cups beef boullon
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup rice
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 1 package (10 oz.) frozen chopped spinach, thawed
- ½ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Cut tomatoes in half; sprinkle lightly with salt. Drain, cut side down, in baking dish. Reserve juice. Remove and chop pulp from tomatoes; drain and reserve juice. Saute tomato pulp, onion, and garlic in butter in medium saucepan until onion is tender. Add enough beef bouillon to tomato juice to make 2½ cups liquid. Add tomato liquid, rice, salt and pepper to vegetable mixture in saucepan, bring to boil, then reduce heat. Cover tightly and simmer 20 minutes. Press moisture from spinach in strainer. Add spinach and all but two (2) tablespoons of the cheese to the rice mixture; stir well. Place tomato halves in buttered baking dish. Mound about ¾ cup rice mixture in each tomato. Sprinkle with reserved cheese. Bake uncovered at 350° F until hot and cheese is slightly brown, 12 to 15 minutes. Serves 8.

Food people plan fair

About 30 food suppliers are expected to take part in the first commercial food fair of this scale on Vancouver Island, Sunday March 9.

The show is intended for food processors and the restaurant trade, said organizer Armando Barbon, of North Douglas Distributors, a major importer and distributor of cheese, gourmet and specialty foods.

Barbon said the one-day fair will open at 11 a.m. in his firm's warehouse at 601 Boleskine. It is not open to the public.

Among the attractions hoped for, Barbon said, is a Cuban lobster chef who will show how to handle this epicurean crustacean. There will be other seafood and cooking demonstrations, something on frozen foods, pizza-making and food films.

Baking harder

Baking is a highly specialized branch of cookery and seems to require a particular kind of talent. It is rare to find someone who is equally good as cook or baker. This is even true of professionals — chefs and patissiers, are traditional rivals, trading generally good-humored jibes, but each secretly believing the other is just a little peculiar.

Indoor picnic is from France via Britain

By MIKE McGRADY

I've always slotted the picnic right there beside First-of-July parades and bleacher seats as an archetypically Canadian experience.

Not so. The picnic — pique-nique, if you will — was invented by the French and perfected by the British.

The starting point of a British picnic is the proper basket — a wicker valise, somewhat larger than an overnight bag, with room for the viands, not to mention the flatware, the monogrammed linen napkins, the silver salt and pepper shakers, the other essentials. I'm telling you, no one worries about ants on a British picnic — they worry about chipping the crystal.

While the British may tend to go a trifle overboard on a picnic, we Canadians often go underboard, settling as often as not for sandwiches and six-packs. Today we're going to hit a happy medium — our at-home picnic is not exactly caviar; nor is it a bunch of baloney.

The Staples: Make sure these items are all on hand: peanut oil, dry white wine, garlic, salt, pepper, cider vinegar, sugar, mustard and butter.

The Shopping List: One rolled fillet of beef (five to seven pounds); imported soy sauce; pumpernickel bread (two loaves); three pounds new potatoes; one pound bacon; one large Bermuda onion; one bunch parsley; one small jar pimentos; one small sour cream; one medium cucumber; one head lettuce; five green peppers; ripe peaches and pears and one bottle vin rose.

Prepare the Day Before: Almost everything.

Begin with the fillet of beef. Trim any excess fat. Put the fillet in a baking dish with a marinade that consists of one cup soy sauce; a half cup of peanut oil; a half cup of white wine; five chopped garlic cloves; a handful of chopped parsley. Every now and then during the next 24 hours, turn the meat over.

Now on to the potato salad. Begin by putting the unpeeled potatoes into a pot full of water and placing the pot over a high heat. Boil the potatoes until a fork passes through them easily, generally about 20 minutes, and then pour away the water and allow the potatoes to cool.

Fry the bacon in a large pan over medium heat, turning the bacon over so that it is cooked on both sides. When bacon is done, allow it to drain on paper towels. Then chop the bacon into postage-stamp-size pieces and put them in a large salad bowl.

Add the Bermuda onion, chopped into small pieces. Peel the cucumber, cut it into small cubes and add that. Cut the pimentos into small pieces and add them. And then, when the potatoes are cool enough to handle, peel them, cut them into chunks and mix them with [illegible] ingredients.

Also add: a small handful of chopped parsley and a generous amount of salt and pepper.

Then, the dressing. Potato salad goes well with a variety of dressings. Some prefer plain mayonnaise or mayonnaise diluted with a small amount of milk. Others opt for a basic oil-and-vinegar dressing. I prefer tossing it with a small container of sour cream mixed with a few spoons of vinegar.

And on the picnic, you'll have something just a little different — instantly pickled green peppers. You'll need a jar with a cap. Then cut the green peppers in halves and remove the seeds. Put the peppers under the broiler — cut side down — for just a few minutes, not to cook them through but just to heat them up. Take the peppers from the broiler and slice them into strips and put them in the jar.

In a saucepan over medium-high heat place three-quarters of a cup of cider vinegar, the same amount of water and a quarter cup of sugar. Add two peeled garlic cloves, a dollop of oil and a dash of salt and pepper. When mixture reaches boiling point, lower heat and simmer for five or six minutes, then pour over the green pepper slices. Cap the jar and refrigerate overnight.

Prepare on the Day of the Picnic: The fillet. Preheat oven to hot 475°. Put the fillet of beef in a roasting pan and cook for about 30 minutes for rare, longer if you want it well done. Every five or 10 minutes while beef is baking, baste it with the marinade. Wrap the roast in metal foil and allow it to cool completely before beginning your at-home picnic.

questions & answers

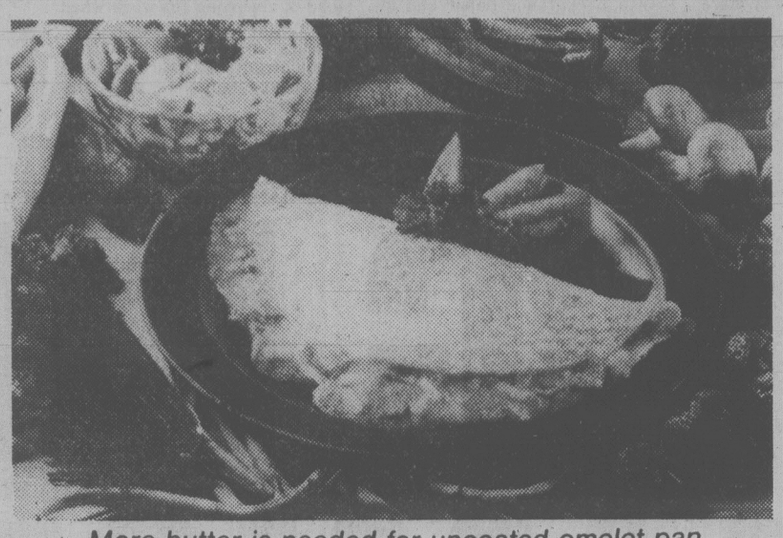
Pan works sans Teflon

Q. I have a Teflon-coated omelet pan that is several years old and it is scratched and worn in spots. Is there any way of having this re-coated? Can I continue to use the pan after the coating has worn off?

A. I have spoken to several kitchen repair experts, including Fred Bridge of the Bridge Kitchenware Corporation. I am told that there is no way within reason to have the coating replaced. You can continue to use the pan with a little extra butter if it is no longer be satisfactory for preparing an omelet without it sticking.

Q. I have had a large quantity of wild rice in my pantry for a year or longer. Do you think it is still usable? Does wild rice deteriorate? To the eye it is free of crawling things.

A. If the rice has been kept tightly sealed, chances are that it is still usable. And there is no reason, if it has been properly stored, why it should be deleterious. Because of a natural drying-out process, the rice may require a longer cooking time and more water than freshly packaged wild rice. But the ultimate answer can be found only in the cooking.



More butter is needed for uncoated omelet pan

Q. I can read French cookbooks and often cook from the original. Numerous recipes call for a brunoise of vegetables. I know what a brunoise is but am curious to know the origin of the name. Can you enlighten me?

A. A brunoise, for those who don't know, is a combination of diced or shredded root vegetables — carrots, onions, leeks, turnips and so on — used for an endless number of French soups and sauces. I have never seen a French encyclopedia that mentioned the origin of the name. I have one English encyclopedia that attributes the name to Brunoy, a district of France that is well known for its vegetables.

Missing wheel said it all

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — Niagara Regional Police knew something was wrong Tuesday when a car near a Fort Erie tavern only had three wheels.

Police say a motorist southbound on the Niagara Parkway lost control of his car and struck a bridge abutment, which snapped off the right front wheel.

The motorist drove an additional seven kilometres until he reached downtown Fort Erie, police said. He had entered the tavern when police spotted the vehicle.

Donald Skolimowski, 36, of Lakeview, N.Y., is charged with failing to remain at the scene of an accident, impaired driving, careless driving, operating an unsafe vehicle and having an open bottle of liquor in his car.

Postal workers lead injury parade

OTTAWA (CP) — More than half of 14,450 disabling injuries suffered by federal employees on the job last year were among postal workers, says a government report.

The injury rate in the post office is twice as high as the rate in private industry in Ontario, 62 injuries per million hours worked compared to 30 injuries in the same work period.

The Canadian Union of Postal Workers terms the situation "a national disgrace."

Says J. C. Farley, head of the post office safety branch: "It is not something to be proud of. There is something definitely wrong."

But the two sides part ways at this point, each offering different reasons and proposing different solutions to what they agree is a serious problem.

Farley's branch compiled figures for the union which say there were 7,724 disabling injuries among postal workers in 1978-79.

Disabling injuries are those severe enough that the employee takes time off work to recover. Half of them were sprains and strains, almost a third were contusions and bruises and the rest ranged from broken limbs to cuts.

There were another 11,264 injuries in government jobs, 3,851 of them among postal workers, that were not severe enough to warrant time off work but required some medical attention.

In a background paper and in interviews union spokesmen blame many of the injuries on working conditions and work demands.

The union recommends tougher limits on the weight an individual is allowed to carry, the right to refuse unsafe work, lower noise levels and dust levels.

On grounds many accidents occur when employees are tired or ill, it recommends less overtime work, a lighter workload on evening and overnight shifts and no more employer "harassment of workers who use sick credits instead of reporting for work when they are ill."

Farley says he is not enthusiastic about any of these proposals and regards some of them unnecessary.

He suggested that training for lifting heavy parcels, mailbags and other objects is either inadequate or being ignored by many employees.

Farley chalked many of the injuries up to human error and seemed somewhat mystified that "this very young group of people is being injured."

Farley said noise levels had been thoroughly tested and were not high enough to cause loss of hearing or injuries. Nor were dust levels too high.

"We've measured it and measured it and found the home is dustier than the plants," he said.

Paper settles 3-year row

OTTAWA (CP) — Arthur Wood, president and publisher of the Ottawa Journal, vowed Monday to "fight like hell" to save his newspaper from collapse as he signed an agreement ending a more than three-year dispute with the Ottawa Typographical Union.

The dispute, which dates back to October, 1976, when 85 composing room employees were locked out, officially ended with the agreement providing benefits for the 16 men who stuck it out on the picket line until five weeks ago.

The package will cost The Journal about $90,000, Wood said. And it ends a union-organized boycott that had pushed daily circulation down to about 58,000 from about 86,000.

The agreement provides jobs for two men, retirement pensions for five men and professional job-finding assistance plus a $150-a-week allowance for a maximum 12 weeks for eight men.

The 16th man died in December. His estate and the five retired employees will each receive a rehabilitation allowance of $2,500.

Also, The Journal will pay pension contributions amounting to $2,132 for each of them, that would have been paid had the disputen- not taken place.

Wood said the paper's circulation had climbed back up to about 70,000 since the September morning overhaul. He expected further dramatic increases as the boycott by sympathetic unions, advertisers and members of the public ends.

The Journal work force now totals 324.

The dispute initially was over technological change in the composing room. The union was fighting against elimination of job security protection for employees whose work was being mechanized out of existence.

The 85 men who were locked out were replaced inside by 26 composing room employees who belong to no union, Wood said.

INSTEAD of creamed onions, try this: Brown little onions in oil, then simmer in wine or broth.

Mix a small jar of Dijon mustard with about 3 ounces of bread crumbs and spread all over a couple of Cornish game hens. Roast about 1¼ hours. Don't tell anyone.

Don't bake moist cookies or cakes on a pan with sides (like a jellyroll pan) or they will steam and be soggy. If you run out of cookie sheets, invert jellyroll pan and bake on the other side.

'Ignorance and money'

CALGARY (CP) — A city antique dealer says Calgary is a perfect target for fraudulent art salesmen "because we've got the perfect combination here — money and ignorance."

Herbert Schwarz says many paintings and antiques decorating some of the city's most elegant homes are likely fakes.

"The amount of fake antiques, paintings and other art works sold in this city is simply astounding."

Most of the fakes are being sold by out-of-town operators who come to Calgary to hold an auction or sale, he said.

Student wins award for bravery

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary student Dave Pocock received an award this week for bravery in saving a man from a burning vehicle. Pocock, a student at the Southern Alberta Institute of Technology, received a certificate of exceptional recognition from police chief Brian Sawyer. The award was for his actions Nov. 24 in saving Louis Knafla from his burning van which had been struck from behind on Macleod Trail.

Annexation 'ruthless land grab'

LEDUC, Alta. (CP) — Edmonton's annexation bid is nothing but a "ruthless land grab" engineered by "empire builders," says Leo LeClerc, former provincial assistant deputy minister of transportation.

LeClerc told an annual chamber of commerce meeting in this community south of Edmonton that the city's application was ridiculous.

"If successful, it would put Edmonton in authority of a land mass two-thirds the size of Rhode Island. Why should they stop there? Why don't they take the whole province?"

Safety padding urged in gyms

WINNIPEG (CP) — A provincial court judge has recommended safety padding be installed on the walls of school gymnasiums following the death of a basketball player Walter Pesclovitch, 22, in a senior men's game Nov. 3 at Precious Blood school. Pesclovitch tumbled into a cement wall of a city gym.

Judge Theodore Lismer also recommended after an inquest that future gyms be built with a three-metre clearance on either end of a basketball court to the wall of the gym. The minimum distance required under existing provincial statutes is one metre.

Centre for 'really bad apples'

EDMONTON (CP) — A single, tough treatment centre for the "really bad apples" among Alberta's juvenile delinquents may soon be necessary, Stanley Mansbridge, social services deputy minister, says. Such a centre, similar to the tough British training school Borstall or the old Alberta centre for delinquents at Bowden, may be needed to protect less serious delinquents at provincial youth centres, he said.

Buffalo jump 'threatened'

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta historic sites board says one of the earliest known buffalo jumps on the continent is threatened by a proposed high-voltage power line.

Radiocarbon dating shows that for at least 6,000 years Indians slaughtered buffalo below the standstone cliff at the Head-Smashed-In jump 35 kilometres west of the southwestern Alberta community of Fort Macleod.

While there are older remains of Indian culture in Alberta "this marked the start of a new technology, a whole new way of life in Western Canada," Dr. William Byrne said in an interview.

"It's the earliest example of this kind of thing anywhere," said Byrne, director of the Archaeological Survey of Alberta.

He said Calgary Power Ltd. proposes to hang a string of 500,000-volt power lines over the cliff, an unacceptable intrusion of 20th century technology into an almost pristine setting.

Banker sees on-farm computers

SASKATOON (CP) — The biggest structural change in Saskatchewan agriculture may be happening under farmers' noses, George Lee, head of agricultural economics at the University of Saskatchewan, told about 400 of those farmers.

They heard Ed Baskier of Winnipeg, assistant general manager of agricultural services for Toronto Dominion Bank, say inflation and high interest rates will lead to more use of on-farm computers, expanded bank services for agriculture and other changes in methods of financing.

Drawing on provincial government figures, Lee said the 55 million acres of farm land in the provinces rose in value by an estimated $2.8 billion to $3.4 billion last year.

During the year, farmers earned a realized net income of $1.04 billion.

The gap followed five years in which net income and increase in land value were approximately equal, totalling $5.4 billion and $5.5 billion respectively.

The result, Lee told agriculture graduates meeting on the final day of the University of Saskatchewan's farm and home week, is that "you're getting a price of land two or three times greater than our cash flow can support."

The hidden but real income from rising land prices is largely free from liability to capital gains tax because of various deductions. A provision in the failed Progressive Conservative budget would have created a further exemption.

"If your income's coming from here and it's tax-free," Lee said, "you're pushing the guy out who's just getting started."

A continuation of the trend would mean "only a very select group of people" would be able to afford Saskatchewan farm land, already beyond the means of many young would-be farmers.

Lee said farmers should at least realize that increasing land prices can change the structure of Prairie agriculture.

He said product prices have risen more rapidly than input costs in the last decade but farmers have taken to buying more of those inputs. They include machinery, fertilizer and other production tools.

Costs and prices had squeezed nearly as close together at the end of the decade as they had been at the start, when heavy world grain stocks caused badly depressed prices.

Comparing average costs and returns from 1972-74 with the moving average covering the last five years, his gross returns had gone up 45 per cent but his net return had declined by 23 per cent.

"It looks like a real kamikaze situation, doesn't it?" he asked.

Baskier predicted heavier capital requirements will force growth of farm units through expansion of multiple ownership.

Russia still silent on envoy kickout

OTTAWA (CP) — The Soviet Union has denounced recent Canadian trade moves against Moscow but it still is unclear whether the Soviet government will retaliate for the expulsion of three embassy employees in Ottawa.

The embassy here distributed a commentary Tuesday by the official Soviet Novosti Press Agency describing the Canadian trade restrictions as "a manifestation of hostility to this country (the Soviet Union) and also part of the U.S.-inspired crusade against detente and peace."

But Soviet Embassy spokesman Victor Mikheev said it will probably be some days before Moscow responds to the ejection of three embassy employees for spying. The Soviet Union did not expel Canadians from Moscow when Ottawa kicked out 13 Soviet diplomats two years ago.

External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald announced Monday three Soviet military officers have been ordered to leave the country in the next week after buying classified information from an American citizen. Exchanges and payments were made in Ottawa.

She said it was not connected with the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. But she added later that the spying may have a "spinoff effect" on other measures Canada is considering to protest the Soviet action in the Asian country.

Canada has said already it will not provide Russia with grain lost because of American reductions in grain exports to the Soviet Union. Ottawa is also pressing for switching the 1980 Summer Olympics from Moscow.

Novosti said in a dispatch from Moscow the Soviet Union intends to take part in the Winter Olympics at Lake Placid, N.Y., "despite rumors lately spread in the West."

The Novosti commentary, written by Alexander Podakin, said it is "particularly deplorable" to see Canada and other Western countries so quickly destroying the trade, scientific and cultural links painstakingly built up over the last 10 years.

The Novosti article said Clark has not mentioned that Canadians have "enthusiastically received Soviet ballet and circus and enjoyed the performances of Soviet singers and dancers."

"Didn't Soviet-Canadian hockey games prove useful for both sides?" the statement said.

Two of the three Soviet officials ordered out of Canada were listed as spies two years ago by Otto Jelinek, incumbent Conservative MP for Halton.

Jelinek said in a telephone interview from his constituency in Oakville, near Toronto, he is renewing his demands for tougher scrutiny of incoming diplomats by the RCMP.

It is up to the government to require closer examination of the background of foreign diplomats, he said. He accused the former Liberal government of frequently failing to take action despite RCMP information of clandestine activities.

He praised the Conservative government for ordering the expulsion.

CIA 'helped ease' shipment of arms

TORONTO (CP) — The Fifth Estate, a CBC television program, says the CIA and the U.S. defence and state departments eased the way for secret shipments of military arms to South Africa through a Canadian company, despite United Nations sanctions against such dealings.

The program says Space Research Corp. of Highwater, Que., on the Vermont border, took steel forgings manufactured in the U.S. and shipped them through Canadian ports to Spain and on to South Africa, where they were used as 155-millimetre shells and gun barrels.

Some of the clandestine activity was carried out in 1978 while the company was under investigation by the RCMP and a U.S. federal grand jury, the program broadcast Tuesday night says.

John Stockwell, former CIA official in charge of operations in Angola, told the program that at that time, South Africa desperately needed about 50,000 artillery shells and the CIA set out to provide them by working around the UN sanctions.

The program says rough steel forgings for the project had been arranged to be made in a U.S. Army munitions plant in Scranton, Pa., supposedly for shipment to Israel.

U.S. regulations state that to turn military equipment over to a private company and to allow export, approval must come from the state department's office of munitions.

The Fifth Estate says Space Research president Gerald Bull, a North Bay, Ont., native who now is a U.S. citizen, got approval in four days by arguing that the forgings were not weapons and therefore did not need government approval for transfer to a private company.

Pot appeal snuffed out

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada rejected arguments based on the Bible, the Magna Carta, the Bill of Rights and the published works of Chief Justice Bora Laskin Tuesday in upholding a conviction of possession of marijuana against two brothers.

William and Walter Tucker told a panel of three judges that marijuana is a sacrament of the Church of the Universe and was used in their method of worship of Jesus Christ.

They argued that when the sale of alcoholic beverages was banned churches were still allowed to use them.

'No advantage' to unification

VANCOUVER (CP) — Unification of the Canadian Armed Forces did not benefit the militia, Col. Graham Blyth, an artillery and counter-intelligence officer, said Tuesday.

The statement was made in a submission on behalf of the Honorary Officers' Association of B.C., which Blyth presented to the committee set up to review unification of Canada's defence forces.

"The thoughtless, relentless, inhuman drive for unification has had its effect on the militia, albeit the disturbance has been modest relative to the regular force," Blyth said.

He said his group does not know of any advantages to the militia from unification which was brought into effect in 1968 in Canada.

The committee concluded two days of listening to submissions and receiving briefs in Vancouver. It will end its six-city tour Thursday in Victoria.

Committee chairman George Fyffe of Ottawa said the committee will hear more submissions in closed sessions at Ottawa later this month and then will file a report to the defence minister.

Before the judge

The preliminary hearing into a charge of attempted murder started in provincial court Tuesday before Judge Blake Allan.

Kian Hock Koh, a 23-year-old Malaysian student, is charged in the Nov. 8 stabbing of a 19-year-old woman outside her residence at 1635 Cook.

The hearing is expected to take at least two days.

Judge William Ostler handed out jail sentences of six months to a 33-year-old man and five months to a 29-year-old man.

William Joseph Dougan was given the six-month term for two counts of uttering forged Royal Bank money orders earlier this year and Donald Frederick Bethune got a five-month sentence for a June, 1978, charge from Nelson of trafficking in marijuana.

Crown counsel Richard Law said Dougan paid for a $194.64 bill at the Queen Victoria Inn with a $721.46 money order which was altered from $1.46 on Jan. 9, and paid Woodwards with a $611.85 money order which had been altered from $1.85 on Jan. 7. Dougan was arrested Jan. 9 in the lounge of the Travelodge motel in Sidney.

Crown counsel Malcolm Macaulay said Bethune sold seven grams (¼-ounce) of marijuana to an undercover policeman for $20.

Ostler also placed Bethune on 18 months probation.

A 30-year-old woman who told Ostler she was pregnant was given a four-month jail sentence.

Pamela Barbara Ann Sykes, 646 Admirals, was being sentenced for possession of a stolen television set, impaired driving, refusing a breath test demand, uttering a forged document, and possession of stolen credit cards.

Judge Harold Alder sentenced a 29-year-old man to three years in jail after he pleaded guilty to a Monday night break-in in Esquimalt and possession of housebreaking instruments.

Allan Reginald Scott, 639 Constance, pleaded guilty and received concurrent sentences of three years for breaking and entering and one year for possession of housebreaking instruments, a hammer, vise grips, screw driver, flashlight, and pliers.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said a woman at 1334 Miles heard some noises about 10:20 p.m. and saw a man climbing in a window at 1330 Miles.

She told police she called out to him but received no response before she called police. When Esquimalt police arrived, they saw Scott placing three potted plants outside. Before being arrested, Scott fled north on Constance and was caught in front of 641 Constance.

When asked by police what he was doing, Laughton said, Scott told officers he was prowling.

Scott had a lengthy criminal history dating back to Oct. 4, 1966, when, as a 15-year-old, he was raised to adult court and received concurrent sentences of two years less a day for 16 counts of breaking and entering and six counts of auto theft.

His most recent conviction was March 23, 1979, when he was given a suspended sentence and one year's probation for possession of stolen property.

A flippant answer resulted in Alder changing his mind and giving two Central Saanich teenagers a short jail sentence instead of a fine.

Dean Lawrence Harper, 19, and Bernard Joseph Lang, 17, pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance by shouting on New Year's Day on Marchant Road near Brentwood Bay.

Law told the court the pair, obviously intoxicated, were observed by Central Saanich police staggering and hollering. They were warned about the noise but continued, forcing officers to arrest them.

Allan levied $25 fines against each and asked when they could pay the fines.

"I don't know," came the reply from one of them.

Alder then said they had better spend a few days in jail instead and gave each two days in jail.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Rodney Gordon Gustafson, 37, of 631 Langford, $400; Robert Murray Taylor, 23, of 2536 Selwyn, $400; Douglas Gary Welsh, 20, of 656 Admirals, $400; and Barry Norman Barton, 17, of 2651 Belmont, $100.

In addition, Welsh was fined another $200 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident, and Barton was ordered to perform 50 hours of community service work.

City lawn bowlers to St. Ann's?

Victoria lawn bowlers soon may be playing on the green fields of St. Ann's Academy if a land swap arrangement outlined Tuesday goes ahead.

The land-use planning committee of Victoria city council blocked a proposal by the CPR lawn bowling club to build a new $150,000 clubhouse to replace old quarters beside its green on Belleville behind the Crystal Garden.

The reason is that the city-owned bowling green is part of the last major open parcel of property in the downtown area which is publicly owned. It includes everything on the block bounded by Belleville, Douglas, Blanshard and Humboldt except for the Church of Our Lord and the Crystal.

The property will some day be redeveloped although at present there are no definite proposals, said committee chairman Ald. Bob Wright.

"If we allow a $150,000 clubhouse we have burned our bridges and killed our options," said Wright.

But the committee suggested a happy compromise. The Provincial Capital Commission wants a slice of the bowling green for an access road to the rear of the Crystal and has informally suggested the bowling club might be relocated to the grounds of the academy half a block away.

The committee told the bowlers to ask the commission — an agency of the B.C. government — if it could build its new clubhouse at St. Ann's. In return the city would be willing to consider an access road for the Crystal across its property.

"I can't think of a better use for that forecourt," Ald. Bill McElroy said of the proposed move to St. Ann's.

Parks administrator Al Smith said he was afraid the green would end up as blacktopped parking lot for the Crystal. He also noted that if the bowling green has to be rebuilt on a new site, it will be three years before it can be played upon.

Committee members said they would oppose such a move and Wright said the bowlers would be assured of access to the existing green while the new one is created.

Centre sale next week: Brewin

Ald. Gretchen Brewin said Tuesday she expects the sale of the trouble-plagued Juvenile Detention Centre to B.C. Buildings Corportation to take place next week.

Brewin said she believes the four core municipalities will agree to the sale of the centre at 1125 Pembroke once an agreement drawn up by the Family Court Committee has been signed by the provincial commissioner of corrections.

Brewin, chairman of the court committee, says it has worked out the best arrangement possible.

The committee is dealing with the leaseholder, the corrections branch of the attorney-general's ministry, instead of future owner BCBC.

"I have confidence the thing (sale) can now proceed," she said.

Present owners Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt, realize the community is anxious the new $200,000 security system be installed in light of recent breakouts by juvenile offenders.

A memorandum of agreement now being prepared by the committee grants it the right to review all cases and to ensure community involvement in the incarceration process after BCBC assumes ownership.

Key issues holding up the sale are overcrowding and the length of time inmates are held at the centre.

The unit has only 20 beds but lately up to 28 juveniles have been held there and a 30-day maximum stay has not been adhered to.

An emergency meeting of the court committee was held Friday after five inmates escaped.

Brewin said she believes BCBC won't start work on the new electronic security system until it actually owns the building, so it is important to complete the sale soon.

However, BCBC property manager Gil Gilmore said Tuesday the corporation is going ahead with the work because it has been assured by the attorney-general's ministry the sale will be completed soon.

Friedmann to address law meet

B.C. ombudsman Karl Friedmann, education minister and speakers from six provinces will take part in a University of Victoria conference on universities and the law opening March 6.

Sessions running through Saturday, March 8, will discuss the impact of legislation and the rulings of courts and tribunals on university and college operations in Canada in the 1980s.

UVic president Dr. Howard Petch will open the conference, and Dean Murray Fraser, of the law faculty, is co-chairman.

Education Minister Brian Smith will be chairman of a session dealing with Educational Malpractice: the Legal Liability for the Failure to Educate, led by Hudson Janisch of the University of Toronto law faculty.

A.A. Keyes, special advisor on copyright to the secretary of state, will give a paper on The Significance of Copyright Law for University Personnel, and University of B.C. law professor Beverley M. McLachlin will speak on the Law of Privileged Communications.

Dalhousie University law professor and former Nova Scotia Labor Relations Board chairman Innis M. Christie will speak on University Employment Law.

Ombudsman Friedmann will speak on The Ombudsman and University Administration in the concluding session.

'I can't vote for Pierre, Joe, I won't vote NDP'

By DAN TURNER
FP News Service

ELECTION 80

OTTAWA — How best to reflect the predominant mood of the southern Ontario electorate as it approaches the Feb. 18 federal election?

Perhaps by selecting standard-bearers for each of the four parties from among the 1,000 voters interviewed by FP News Service during the last two weeks.

Speaking on behalf of the Conservatives, Phil Whitehead, a 21-year-old school bus driver from Scarborough East:

"I'm going to hold my nose and vote Conservative again."

For the Liberals, Helen Ruddy from Hamilton Mountain:

"I'm voting Liberal — Trudeau got this place into a mess and he's probably the best man to get us out of it."

And for the NDP, Virginia Dohany, a housewife from Lincoln riding near Hamilton:

"I'd like to get the NDP in to scare the others into doing a decent job. They both need a swift kick in the behind and this is the only way I can think of doing it."

Finally, speaking for the three people who said they would vote for the Rhino party, Eva Kopamees, a self-employed artist:

"I'm going Rhino. None of the other parties seems to say much worth listening to, but it's my duty to vote."

Some people were cheery and chipper, of course, but for a lot of people thinking about the election meant subjecting themselves to bouts of frustration, gloom, confusion or despair.

"I can't vote for Trudeau, I can't vote for Clark, and I won't vote for the NDP," said the owner of an electronics repair shop in Scarborough Centre one drizzly day last week. "You might say I'm undecided."

Confused or not, most people said they had "definitely" or "probably" decided for whom they were going to vote, and the Conservatives took a hammering in the ten ridings surveyed — all of which went Conservative in last year's federal election.

Only 255 of the 493 people who said they had voted Conservative last time said they intended to do so again — 78 said they were switching to the Liberals, 35 to the NDP, and 21 to "anybody but the Conservatives."

A far larger percentage of those who voted Liberal or NDP last time intended to stick with those parties, and with the sizable number of voters swinging to them from the Conservatives, Joe Clark will be lucky to hold onto any of the ten ridings.

Among those voters who felt they had already decided how they would mark their ballot, one of three reasons was cited far more frequently than any others as their basis for decision.

Number 1 — in a tight three-way race — was a distaste for Conservative Leader Joe Clark.

"I went NDP last time but I'm undecided this time," said Robert Stewart, a painter from Lincoln riding. "My very strongest feeling is that I don't want Joe Clark in again, and I'm trying to figure out how to make sure of that."

Said a 28-year-old housewife from neighboring Hamilton Mountain: "I'm switching from Conservative to Liberal. I don't think Joe Clark did a very good job — it's kind of scary to think of what he might do next."

The second most-mentioned issue works in favor of the Conservatives: Hundreds of people chorused one simple refrain — "I don't think they gave Joe Clark a chance."

L. P. Finlay, 44, a sheet-metal worker from Scarborough East, contended that "you can't give one man 11 years and another seven months and say the second guy didn't do the job."

Unfortunately for the Conservatives most of those who shared Finlay's views used their reasoning to explain why they were voting Conservative again — only two or three people said they were outraged enough by this unfairness to switch to the Conservatives from one of the other parties.

The anti-Clark feeling, on the other hand, while not mentioned any more often than the "no chance" reasoning, was cited by scores of people as their reason for abandoning the Conservatives.

The third major issue mentioned is also swinging votes away from the Conservatives — that being the strong perception that Joe Clark does not live up to his promises and Pierre Trudeau does.

Bert McGarrell is a commercial sales and votes in the rural riding of London-Middlesex that surrounds the city of London. "I think I'll change from Conservative to Liberal," he said last week. That bugger Clark — I wasn't against the budget, but he can't keep a promise."

If these three issues stood for those who had made up their minds, three others were also mentioned frequently.

One was the Crosbie budget, and voters were about evenly split as to whether they liked it or not.

"I don't like Crosbie's budget — all the little people are getting burnt," said an outspoken Ottawa West housewife sorrounded by her four children.

But David Black, 23, who runs a brass and copper shop in Toronto's trendy Beaches district, said he was switching from NDP to Conservative because of the budget.

Pointing to his flashy new car he said someone his age shouldn't be living so extravagently — "I should be driving an old wrecker and the budget is the best thing that ever happened to this country."

Ranking fifth and sixth as issues were the personalities of Pierre Trudeau and Ed Broadbent.

A strong anti-Trudeau sentiment is still cherished by a large number of southern Ontario voters, although some people admit they're finding it hard to keep up their antagonism toward him.

Gwen Clark, a 39-year-old housewife from Hamilton Mountain, is hanging tough. "I was going to change from Conservative to Liberal but when I found out Trudeau was running again I decided to stay where I am."

But Glen Dupont, a 19-year-old university student from Scarborough West, said he's changed his mind about Trudeau.

"It's sad to say, but Trudeau seems to be the only one who knows what's going on. Last election I thought anyone was better than Trudeau, but now I realize that anything is not better."

Several voters shared the sentiments of a 32-year-old housewife from the Beaches: "I'm going with Trudeau this time because I think we're going to have a war, and I want the security of his age and mind."

Ed Broadbent was often mentioned favorably as an alternative to Clark and Trudeau and nobody had a bad word to say about him.

But it was clear that his favorable image wasn't always going to win NDP votes.

Voters who said they were going to swing to the NDP from other parties — and there were 51 of them compared to 18 switching away — tended either to say they like Broadbent or that the other two parties had been failures and the New Democrats should be given a chance.

The only other issues raised that are worth mentioning were the anti-government feeling that the Conservatives didn't call Parliament together soon enough after the last election and the pro-government feeling that the Liberals had been irresponsible in forcing an election that woul cost Canadians more than $60 million.

Clark's tax deductability scheme for mortgage interest payments was mentioned by only four or five voters, and only one woman mentioned "the blue-eyed Arabs" from Alberta in an area that is supposedly feeling more and more anti-west.

Trudeau backs down on oil price promise

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — Pierre Trudeau backed off Tuesday from a promise to tell voters before the Feb. 18 election how much a Liberal government would raise oil prices in coming years.

Trudeau told reporters he plans to reveal only a possible formula for calculating that price — despite his statement in Toronto Jan. 12 that his party would announce a "made in Canada" price for oil during the campaign.

However, he did say the Liberals would tie any future price increases under the formula to the costs of new production and the increases would be "considerably lower" than those proposed by Joe Clark and his Progressive Conservatives.

"There will be a formula, but it won't be one on which you can mathematically say, 'And this is the price today,'" Trudeau told an informal news conference.

The statement contradicted what he told party workers in a major speech outlining the broad themes of party policy 10 days earlier. At that time, he said: "The Liberal party will in this campaign announce a made in Canada price that's fairer to all Canadians."

Trudeau has sharply attacked Conservative proposals for oil price increases at nearly every stop in the campaign, stressing to local audiences the impact of the higher prices in each of the regions.

In a speech to about 300 residents here in the riding of Western Arctic Tuesday, he accused the Clark government of not having "the common sense" to recognize that [illegible]sers would be among those most severely affected by sharp increases in oil prices.

And in an evening speech later in the Winnipeg riding of St. Boniface, Trudeau told a lively crowd of about 1,000 that long distances and harsh winters in the West mean they, too, would feel the pinch if Clark's proposals were allowed to go ahead.

The Liberal leader repeated his opposition to the Tory budget proposal to raise excise taxes on gasoline and diesel fuel by four cents a litre (18 cents a gallon), but he revealed no more of his party's energy policies.

The Clark government proposed in the budget that led to its defeat in the Commons last month that oil prices should more than double over the next four years with annual increases of $4 to $4.50 a barrel. The current Canadian price for crude oil at the wellhead is $14.75.

Rhinos lampoon 'puppets'

TORONTO (UPC) — The Rhinoceros Party will not let Canadian voters be deprived of a televised debate between major party leaders, so it plans to stage a meeting of the "puppet leaders," a party spokesman said Tuesday.

The tongue-in-cheek Rhinoceros Party will use its free-time political broadcast spot to air a "no frills" debate featuring marionettes representing the four major party leaders, spokesman John Douglas said.

Prime Minister Joe Clark will be a turkey, Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau a peacock, New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent a duck and Social Credit Party leader Fabien Roy a dodo, Howard said.

During the planned debate, Howard said, "the turkey falls forward onto the microphone. The peacock preens itself and as he moves about, feathers fall out. The duck sits there and flaps up and down. The dodo says 'is that right?' and halfway through, he leaves."

A Rhinoceros, of course, will also be present.

Ed and Joe out gunning for Pierre

ELECTION 80

VANCOUVER (CP) — Both Prime Minister Clark and NDP Leader Ed Broadbent took pot-shots at Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau Tuesday.

Chatting with reporters as he campaigned, Clark said he can overcome his party's massive 20-percentage point deficit in various opinion polls as he seeks to convince people that Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau is being undemocratic.

Clark expressed some relief however that Conservative legislation that would have shortened the election campaign from an average of 60 to 47 days did not get passed in the last Parliament because, in this case, he needs the time.

He said he believes the fact that Trudeau continues to turn down debates with other party leaders and refuses to reveal his party policies can be turned into a major election issue.

Clark made the comments after telling Conservative supporters in suburban Mission-Port Moody constituency that democracy has become an issue in this campaign because Trudeau has shown contempt for democracy by refusing to take part in the debate.

Talking with reporters, Clark stopped short of saying he has been wasting his time campaigning, sometimes at a hectic pace, since before Christmas. But he said Canadians are just thawing out of the deep freeze of Christmas and that the campaign really started only a few days ago.

The prime minister flew to Toronto Tuesday after three days on the British Columbia lower mainland where he continued to pour abuse upon the head of Trudeau. He took roundhouse swings at the former prime minister as he spoke to party supporters in Mission-Port Moody, [illegible] the New Democratic Party won in the May 22 election but which the Conservatives feel they can take this time.

Clark told supporters, "We cannot have a strong democratic system if we have a national leader like Mr. Trudeau who refuses to debate the issues, who refuses to face the other leaders, who refuses to answer the questions of the Canadian people . . . "

"What is at issue here is democracy. He does not believe in it. We believe in it."

In his campaign, Ed Broadbent kept Pierre Trudeau squarely in the middle of his sights as he criticized "the hypocrisy of the Liberal campaign."

He said Trudeau has the nerve to criticize Prime Minister Clark for pursuing many of the same policies the Liberal leader had espoused during his 11 years as prime minister.

"Now that he's in opposition, he's quite hypocritically criticizing the Tories for continuing Liberal policies," Broadbent told a group of party workers.

The NDP leader also said Trudeau was afraid to meet his rivals on television before the Feb. 18 election "because he doesn't want to face the contradiction between his own talk and his own actions."

Wrapping up a 24-hour swing through British Columbia, Broadbent campaigned as if Clark wasn't even a contender in the election.

When he took the occasional jab at Clark, it was for continuing policies started by the Liberals.

The NDP hopes to increase its standing in this politically volatile province by attracting disaffected Progressive Conservatives and winning over a reportedly large group of wavering voters at the expense of the Liberals.

305 DEATHS and FUNERALS

SHAW — In Royal Jubilee Hospital on January 21, Mrs. Alice Walker Shaw, aged 89 years of 952 Arm Street, formerly of 1955 Ashgrove Street, widow of the late Jonas Binns Shaw. She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Shirley Ellis of Victoria; two sisters in England and five grandchildren and great-grandchildren.
Funeral service will be held Thursday, January 24 at 2:00 p.m. in Hayward's Thomson and Irving Chapel. Interment to follow in Royal Oak Burial Park.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

TO THE DOCTORS, NURSES and staff of the Royal Jubilee Hospital, Royal two for the kindness to the late Orval Gibson, husband and father of Ora and family.

309 IN MEMORIAM

EDINGTON - Mary, passed away 19th January 1976.
Sadly missed, remembered always, Mother, Peggy, Richard, Colleen.

MARCHMENT - Ronald G., passed away January 23, 1970.
Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear;
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thought to reach,
Sweet to remember him who once was here
And who, though absent, is just as dear.
Lovingly remembered by his Families.

OKELL - In loving memory of Jack, who passed away Jan. 23, 1979.
Not dead to us who loved him,
Not lost, but gone before;
He lives with us in memory
Any will forever more.
Sadly missed, Frank & Vicki Hickman & Albert Lyle.

OKELL — Jack, in loving memory of husband and father who passed away January 23, 1979.
A year has passed since that sad day
When you were suddenly called away
You've a place in our hearts and always will
A special place that no one else could fill.
—Lovingly remembered and sadly missed by Myrtle, Bill, Wayne and Maureen. Also brother, Roy and mother, Mrs. K. Okell.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

God in his wisdom has recalled
The boon
His love had given
And though the body slumbers here
The soul is safe in heaven.

Asiatic expert speaks

The head of the sociology department at New Zealand's University of Canterbury will speak Jan. 28 in room 167 of the Elliott building at 8 p.m.

Prof. William Willmott's subject is the cultural and political past of four Asiatic nations — Vietnam, Cambodia, North Korea and China.

Willmott is visiting professor at the UVic centre for Pacific and oriental studies.

He taught at the University of B.C. from 1961 to 1973 and is internationally recognized in the study of overseas Chinese communities.

A book co-authored by Willmott, From China to Canada, was commissioned by the Canadian government as part of a series on cultural contributions of immigrants.

Aldermen clear decks

Two Central Saanich aldermen have resigned to try for retiring Mayor Jean Butler's job.

David Hill and Frank Waring submitted their resignations Monday night.

That opens the way for two persons to run for aldermen in the March 15 byelection.

Plant genealogy a study in itself gardening

hilda beastall

Wondering about plant relationships set me on the trail of decorative plants related to common vegetables and fruits.

Few gardeners give themselves the pleasure of growing ornamental alliums because they are also called flowering onions, and are indeed closely related to garlic, onions, and the rest of the tribe.

And all cabbage types and turnip belong in the botanical family Cruciferae. When garden soil becomes contaminated with the club-root disease, ornamentals of the same family may become infected. So we keep the scented flowering stocks and wallflowers separate.

Interesting to find is the fact that lettuce is just one of the vast family Compositae (Daisy types). Included are hundreds of soft stemmed plants, a few shrubs and small trees. Notice a daisy even if the plant is new to you, and most likely it will be found listed by its generic name under Compositae. Yet lettuce flowers do not look like daisies to us amateurs. The flower parts are in miniature.

Returning to the ornamental allium, perhaps gardeners will be more inclined to take a chance on growing a few bulbs if they know it is a member of the family Liliaceae (Lily). Included as botanical relatives are such varied plants as yucca, asparagus, colchicum, hyacinth, tulip, trillium, aspidistra, dracaena, and lilium — the lily of our fields and gardens.

Many of these favorites have the appeal of fragrance as well as of form and color. The allium has varieties with attractive colors, and several have a sweet fragrance. All are easy in a sunny well-drained soil; in a garden environment most will last for several years without needing lifting for replanting. Some naturalize freely.

The botanical family Solanaceae will be known to some gardeners chiefly for solanum, the ornamental Jerusalem-cherry (pot plant) and the Deadly Nightshade. Yet the same family includes our food plants tomato, potato, sweet pepper, eggplant. And the great garden decorators petunia, nicotiana, and salpiglosses. As another reminder, the poisonous commercial tobacco plant is also a close relative.

One of the largest plant families botanically is that of the rose — Rosaceae. Important too, for it contains most of the favorite fruit trees and berry climbers of the north temperate zone, together with dozens of purely ornamental trees and shrubs.

Included in the family Rosaceae are the genera cotoneaster, pyracantha, crataegus (thorn), kerria, geum, photoinia, rosa (the garden rose), and aruncus (a handsome native).

Back again to the vegetables, while many gardeners have never seen the flower umbels of carrot or parsnip, some may recall the small heads of tiny blossom on parsley. The plant, like carrot and parsnip, is biennial. The heads are larger on the carrot and parsnip but in the same form of umbels which give the family name of Umbelliferae.

Perhaps more commonly seen are the huge heads of flowers on several culinary and medicinal herbs such as angelica, fennel and dill.

Plant families have an interest for gardeners as well as for botanists. Apart from merely expanding one's knowledge, which is of no value in itself, the interest aids a gardener in identifying strange plants seen in gardens and along the way.

McCartney 'looks good taking it great': Linda

TOKYO (UPI) — Paul McCartney ended his first week in jail today, cheerful, cutting down on his smoking — and uncertain of his fate.

His wife, Linda, was allowed to visit her husband for the first time Tuesday and said the rock star was "taking it great. His sense of humor — it's amazing. I was amazed. He looks good."

McCartney flew into Tokyo Jan. 16 to perform 11 concerts, all sold out, with his rock group Wings. He was arrested at the airport by customs agents who said they found nearly 8 ounces of marijuana in his luggage. The concert tour was canceled.

After two days at a jail in Tokyo, McCartney was ordered held at least another 10 days for questioning. Prosecutors have said they don't know if he will be deported or indicted.

Promoters have refunded money for the tickets purchased for the canceled concert tour. In all, the cancelations and purposeless flights to Japan are expected to wind up costing around $1 million.

"It's a strain," Mrs. McCartney said. "I wouldn't mind if we knew what was happening and knew he was getting out, but not to know — it's been horrible."

Jail officials have refused McCartney's request to have a guitar while jailed, so "he just mainly meditates and reads because he's on his own a lot," his wife said.

"He's not allowed to write. He said he'd like to write because he could at least write a biography or something."

She said McCartney is allowed only two cigarettes a day, "so he's cutting down, anyway."

During her visit to the jail, where more than 100 fans waited outside as they have daily, hoping vainly for a glimpse of McCartney, Linda brought her husband a cheese sandwich. Both are vegetarians.

During her visit with the rock star, Mrs. McCartney was accompanied by his Japanese lawyer and by her brother, John Eastman, a New York lawyer.

Spy escapes Calif. jail

LOMPOC., Calif. (AP) — Convicted spy Christopher Boyce escaped from a locked cellblock and scaled two 3½-metre fences to break out of a maximum-security prison — and officials are trying to figure out how he did it.

Federal, state and local officials mounted an intense search Tuesday after the escape from the federal correctional institution at Lompoc was noticed at a prisoner check Monday night. The FBI took over the investigation because of Boyce's espionage background.

Boyce, 26, entered the prison on June 20, 1977, to begin a 40-year term for giving copies of classified defense documents to Soviet agents. His boyhood friend, Andrew Lee, is serving a life sentence at Lompoc for his role in the case, the subject of a 1979 book, The Falcon and the Snowman, by New York Times reporter Robert Lindsey.

Prison officials could not explain how Boyce — who disappeared between prisoner checks at 4 p.m. and 10 p.m. Monday — was able to leave the locked housing unit of the prison 240 kilometres northwest of Los Angeles.

"At that time at night the prisoners are locked inside the building and we just don't know how he did it," said spokesman Bill Bailey.

"There is no indication at this point that there was any outside help."

A pair of wirecutters and a crude wooden ladder were found near the two rear fences 100 to 200 metres from the buildings, Bailey said.

Boyce's escape was the first this year from Lompoc. Nine people including Leonard Peltier, an American Indian Movement activist, broke out of the prison last year in three separate incidents.

All of the escapees were eventually recaptured or killed. A tenth, John Sherman, escaped during a visit to a doctor's office outside the prison and is still at large.

Boyce cleared several U.S. government security checks to obtain a job as a security clerk for Los Angeles-area defense contractor TRW Inc.

Rhodesian candidate shot

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Unidentified gunmen Tuesday shot and killed a man believed to be a black nationalist candidate for next month's election, police said.

A spokesman identified the victim as Oliver Saunyama, a member of Rev. Wdabnigi Sithole's Zimbabwe African National Union.

Men armed with automatic weapons blasted Saunyama's car as he left his home in a Salisbury suburb, police said. The killing was the fifth attack on political figures in the Rhodesian capital in the last six weeks.

Saudis demand deposits back, but Egypt can't pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a serious threat to the shaky Egyptian economy, Saudi Arabia and several other Arab states are demanding the return of up to $4 billion in bank deposits, which they say have been frozen by the Cairo government.

U.S. sources say Egypt is in such a shaky financial condition that it cannot afford to repay the money, which was deposited before Egypt signed its separate peace with Israel, a move that angered Cairo's former benefactors.

Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the others have complained to the Washington-based International Monetary Fund that Egypt has frozen the deposits and asked for help in forcing payment.

"It's a rather ticklish issue," said one U.S. source. "Egypt can't pay; the Saudis are pushing."

The United States, which finds itself in an awkward position in the dispute, is trying to stay out in hopes the IMF can find a solution.

The U.S. considers it vital to be on good terms with both Saudi Arabia and Egypt — the Saudis because of their huge oil reserves and Egypt because of its role in helping fashion the peace pact with Israel.

Yet a U.S. official acknowledged that it is virtually impossible for the United States to remain out of the dispute because it is the single most influential member of the 140-member IMF. Saudi Arabia also is a power in the organization, which supervises operations of the international economy.

Further complicating the U.S. position is the fact that the Carter administration has frozen $8 billion in Iranian assets. Both Kuwait and the Saudis have criticized that action.

The IMF, which has refused to consider Iran's complaint against the United States, was scheduled to take up the complaints against Egypt on Monday but deferred action at the request of Egypt.

An IMF spokesman said the complaints contend Egypt's refusal to pay "amounts to a freeze, while the Egyptians are taking a softer approach." He declined to discuss the matter further.

A Kuwaiti newspaper said during the weekend that as much as $4 billion may be frozen by the Egyptian government.

Opening lead — two of hearts.

Good bridge is mostly a matter of good logic. Bridge is not the kind of game where you can afford to be intellectually lazy — if you want to be a good player. On the contrary, you should be willing to concentrate at all times on exactly what's going on, and never let your thinking stop for a moment.

For example, suppose you're West and decide to lead a heart against three notrump. Declarer wins, your partner's ten of hearts with the king, plays a low diamond to dummy's king and a low diamond back to his eight. You win with the ten as your partner discards a heart, and the question is what to play next.

It is clear that you should lead the ace of spades at this point, followed by the jack and another spade. If you do, the contract goes down one; if you don't, South makes at least three notrump.

How can you be expected to find this deadly accurate defense without seeing all four hands? The answer is simple enough. All you have to do is put all the available clues together and go on from there.

You learned at trick one that declarer had the A-K-9 of hearts. How could you tell this? Because East would have played the ace if he had had it, and similarly would have played the nine (not the ten) if he had had either the 10-9 or J-10-9.

You learned during the play that South had exactly five diamonds, and you also learned from the bidding that South almost certainly had four clubs. It therefore followed that South started with a singleton spade, and that regardless of the size of that spade your side could quickly cash four spade tricks and so defeat the contract. It's sheer logic, that's all.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Past efforts bear fruit; money situation is brighter than originally anticipated. Cancer, Capricorn persons figure prominently. One in position of authority flashes green light for your progress. You're due for promotion.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take initiative, make new starts in new directions. Timing, judgment are on target. Wear bright colors, make personal appearances, break free from "foolish" restrictions. You will be rid of unnecessary burden. Aries individual helps you obtain confidential data.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Look behind scenes for answers. Be sensitive to subtle hints, nuances. Intuitive intellect works overtime — you learn from one who is temporarily incapacitated. Leo, Aquarius individuals play key roles. Love is very much in picture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Follow through on hunch, learn by teaching, welcome contact with one who can aid you in fulfilling hopes, wishes. Another Cancer, a Taurus and an Aquarian figure in scenario. What seems far away is closer than originally anticipated. Message will become crystal clear.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You receive good news in connection with prestige, occupation, civic duties. Social activity accelerates. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play significant roles. Career opportunity comes "out of blue." Be alert, aware and define ambitions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Good Moon aspect coincides now with travel, long-distance communications, publishing and educational projects. Be aware of details, check fine print and read between the lines. You are due to gain through written word.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Money picture brightens — partner, close associate, mate cooperate in what could be a financial coup. Be receptive, analytical, ready for change, travel, variety and a special love relationship. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Go slow, maintain low profile, stress diplomacy, security, family harmony and valid legal agreements. Defer to wishes of those who do have your best interests at heart. Plant seeds for future — for now, play waiting game.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Study Scorpio message for valuable hint. Be thorough, define meanings, streamline techniques, become more familiar with security measures and basic issues. One who usually is introverted could make "startling" admission.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent on change, challenge, intensified relationship. Apply personal touch — get off sidelines and into game. Means know that you are involved and don't rely on halfway measures. Stake your claim. Go all out for victory!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Tie loose ends — ask questions, know your subject. Be aware of leases, rentals, legal rights and permissions, loopholes — and fathom motives of associate who vacillates from one position to something different.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): New, versatile approach to questions, problems and issues will bring desired results. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Relatives, short trips, messages, ideas which can be transformed into viable concepts — these are emphasized.

IF JANUARY 24 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are attractive, unorthodox, have unusual voice and distinct sense of drama. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. January and October could be your most memorable months of 1980, a year featuring realignments, reviews, defining of terms, potential — and a time when you separate what is real from sheer fantasy.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"I do like your house, obviously 19th century," said Harry. "When exactly was it built?"

Jerry smiled. "Well, it's more than a hundred years old, but figure it out yourself," he replied. "If it's still standing as many years after the end of this century as it was years before the start of this century, it will be ten years younger than the product of the digits of the year it was built."

What year was that?

Maguire suicide shakes both Belfast factions

CORRIGAN
. . . founded movement

BELFAST (AP) — The suicide of Anne Maguire has shaken the people of Northern Ireland who thought after 10½ years of bombing, shooting and bloodshed that they were immune to shock.

In mourning the woman whose loss of three children gave rise to the Peace People movement, both Roman Catholics and Protestants are mourning themselves, locked in a cycle of hate whose casualties go far beyond the official death toll.

A neighbor found 34-year-old Mrs. Maguire in a blood-soaked armchair in her home in a Belfast suburb Monday. Beside her lay a carving knife and electric garden shears.

"She died of a broken heart," said Ciaran McKeown, a Peace People leader.

Rev. John Murray, a Roman Catholic priest who was called to Mrs. Maguire's home, said: "I suppose this is a sad illustration of how the troubles continue to affect people. After people who have lost someone drop out of the news, the public tend to forget about them but their lives continue to be nightmares."

More than 2,000 people have died in the bloody political-religious war involving militant Protestants, British and Northern Irish security forces and the Irish Republican Army, which seeks to unite the predominantly-Protestant province with the predominantly-Roman Catholic Irish republic.

But there are many times 2,000 bereaved friends and relatives, injured and maimed and those who simply live in fear. Quietly, remorselessly, the troubles take their toll in mental stress.

Mrs. Maguire's agony was only beginning on Aug. 10, 1976, when the car of an IRA gunman, fatally shot by British troops, went out of control, hit Mrs. Maguire and crushed to death Joanne, 6, John, 2, and Andrew, 6 weeks.

Mrs. Maguire awoke after two weeks in a coma and was told Mark, 5, was her only surviving child.

In the wave of revulsion that followed, the Peace People movement was founded by Mrs. Maguire's sister, Mairead Corrigan, Betty Williams and Mrs. McKeown, all Roman Catholics. It grew out of a mass march by Roman Catholics and Protestants after the children's funeral and the next year won the Nobel Peace Prize.

As the movement waxed and waned the world forgot about Mrs. Maguire and her husband Jackie.

Attempting a fresh start, they moved to New Zealand.

Authorities in Belfast answered their claim for £10,000 — $26,000 — compensation with an offer of one third of that. They told the government to keep it.

Unable to settle and escape their grief, the Maguires returned to Northern Ireland in January, 1978, just seven months after emigrating.

Ironically, Mrs. Maguire took her life one day before the scheduled opening of a court hearing that legal sources say would probably have resulted in a compensation award of more than three times the £10,000 the Maguires had originally asked.

Tuesday's Belfast Telegraph commented in an editorial: "The suffering of the Maguires symbolizes the suffering in Protestant and Roman Catholic homes across the land today . . . There are innumerable people whose lives have been virtually destroyed by the deaths and sufferings of loved ones. What can we say to them? How can we still the pain?"

San Salvador death toll pegged at 20

SAN SALVADOR (AP) — Bomb blasts and machine-gun bursts shook San Salvador during the night after a gunfight left an estimated 20 dead and 80 wounded during a mass demonstration against El Salvador's three-month-old junta.

Hospital officials said one of the wounded in Tuesday's demonstration was journalism student Bruce Yeager of Seattle. He was shot in the leg.

Seven powerful bombs exploded within 20 minutes late Tuesday night and three of them damaged the Italian Embassy, a shopping centre and the Hyatt Hotel.

Police said they did not know where the other four bombs were detonated. No injuries were reported from the blasts.

Leftists put the bodies of 13 victims from Tuesday's march on the steps of the metropolital cathedral.

The march, by an estimated 100,000 leftists, was a show of unity among four pro-Marxist groups which until recently had been split by ideological squabbles.

The leftists claim the new government has not made good on its promises to bring social and political reforms to El Salvador, which is sharply polarized between rich and poor after 47 years of military governments.

The demonstration was the stiffest and bloodiest challenge to date to the civilian-military junta that has governed El Salvador since a military coup deposed Gen. Carlos Humberto Romero Oct. 15.

It was not clear who fired the first shots during Tuesday's march. A national guard statement said the first shots came from the marchers but witnesses said they were fired from the palace which houses several government agencies, including the defence ministry.

Eaton's Consumer Tips
What you should know about TV buying

Remote Control
Adjust the volume and turn set on or off from your chair. With the aid of new electronic channel selectors, you can locate the desired channel instantly. Thanks to automatic color tuning you never have to leave your chair to adjust the set.

Black Matrix Picture Tube
'Matrix' is the black coloring on the picture tube that absorbs light. It accents the tiny red, blue and green phosphor dots in the picture tube resulting in a sharper, clearer color picture.

Automatic color tuning
Most automatic 'one button' color tuning systems work by memorizing the correct color, and adjusting the color to suit that standard. RCA offers a special automatic fine tuning system called Channelock. Using quartz crystals, it prevents tuner drift and color distortion. The result is excellent channel tuning and picture reproduction.

Automatic Light Sensors
No matter how the room light varies, this automatic device will keep your picture bright and the contrast sharp. It is especially valuable for viewing in a bright, sunny room.

New planning body faces Scott St. brouhaha

The first public meeting of Victoria's advisory planning commission Wednesday night filled city hall's main committee room to overflowing as residents protested the closure of Scott Street for a small shopping centre.

Danclair Developments Ltd. came to the APC for rezoning of a closed service station on Hillside, commercial property next door, several residential lots on Scott and the closure of the northerly 200 feet of the street.

The neighborhood shopping centre Danclair would build is across the street from Hillside Shopping Centre.

"It's a first-class development but the residents, I know, have some concerns," said architect Bob Siddall.

He said the city planning and traffic departments have encouraged the closure of Scott as a way of improving the traffic flow on Hillside.

It would also be a preliminary step to the city's eventual plan for a median strip down the centre of the street on this section of Hillside, he said. Closing off Scott would also help preserve the residential nature of the remainder, Siddall claimed.

But residents of Scott Street — some 40 and 50 years in the same house — didn't see it the same way. They wanted their access to Hillside preserved, and they worried about how emergency vehicles would get into the new centre.

Jim Britton of 3009 Scott said the design of the shopping centre is nice, but he and his neighbors would only see a blank wall up at the end of Scott, the back of the development.

"We'll see a wall the same as your blackboards there," he told the APC. "We want Scott left the way it is."

"This is the part we don't like," said Leonard Brown of 3007 Scott. It's already difficult for residents to get over to Hillside Mall, he pointed out. "You can't get over to Shelbourne for love or money after 4 p.m."

Ninety-year-old William Chapman, 3050 Scott, said he and his wife moved there 13 years ago because it was close to the stores and buses.

"I want transportation. I don't want an alley again. I want freedom. I want transportation through."

Mrs. Alex Bell, 3066 Scott, said: "I'm going to be the fella right agin the wall."

She noted that developer John Daniel had come around recently and told residents it would be only one storey higher. "Now tonight it's two storeys."

He had also mentioned 52 parking spaces in his pitch to the neighbors, said Mrs. Bell, but Siddall told the APC 78 were going in — "quite a jump."

After listening to the residents, APC chairman Jim Cosh thanked them for coming and told them the commission would meet in private on Thursday with city staff to debate the project.

Two other rezoning applications were also aired at the meeting — a plan by M.B. Roberts to rezone two lots in Vic West between Russell and Front streets from single family to duplex, and a revived five-storey law office building on Burdett opposite the Law Courts.

Owner Robert McAdam of Park Pacific realty told the APC the Burdett project would be a five-storey office block at 809-837 Burdett. It is zoned for apartments.

"We feel it is not suitable for residential use. We feel it should be an office building of a prestige nature."

McAdam said Thomas Hartshorne Ltd. and Samoth Financial Corp., which owns Century 21 real estate, would relocate from Vancouver to the new building — to be called the Law Garaens — and occupy about a third of the space.

Planning meet proves popular

. . . meeting 'useful'

The public and other interested observers outnumbered the commissioners Wednesday night for the first open meeting of the advisory planning commission, the agency which advises city council on zoning.

It got pretty heated during the two-hour session — but not because of any controversy. The room at city hall was too small and half the people were smoking.

City planner Geoff Greenhalgh was carting in extra chairs for the audience at the last minute.

Chairman Jim Cosh, a chartered accountant and partner in Thorne Riddell here, said later he found the meeting useful.

"As we get into it I think it'll be a good thing," he said.

A developer benefits by getting some early public reaction to his proposal, before the APC has sent its recommendation on to city council, Cosh added.

Previously, the public hearing before council was the only forum for residents to register their opinions. By that stage, many people considered a development a fait accompli.

Some residents appeared annoyed they couldn't ask any questions directly of the developer, but Cosh said there may be some changes in procedures at the next public meetings. They will be held monthly, every third Tuesday.

The APC is composed of 15 people — the mayor, four aldermen, several neighborhood representatives, a couple of developers, a contractor and some local businessmen. All serve without pay.

Besides receiving specific rezoning applications, Cosh said the commission spends much of its time on more general issues, such as the recent downzoning of James Bay and Fairfield.

The public meeting adds a fourth monthly session to its agenda.

Hydro not selling panels

B.C. Hydro is selling a booklet on solar hot water heating but it isn't selling the panels.

The booklet sells for $2 and lists contractors who have the panels for sale.

A story in Tuesday's Times did not make clear that Hydro is providing information only and not the panels.

Last bid loses out

Oak Bay Ald. Shirley Dowell lost out again Tuesday in her last bid to have Victoria reduce its fee for administrative service to the library system.

During the eight years she has served on the board — the maximum term — she has proposed on numerous occasions that the city cut the fee.

The city charged approximately $90,000 in 1979 and Dowell wanted the city's levy reduced from four to two per cent or less.

Dowell argued that much of the work done by city staff is a duplication of that done by library personnel.

On a split vote, however, the board decided instead to simply ask the city to review the fee structure.

In other business the board decided the library services committee should review the matter of bookmobile service in Royal Oak.

Library director Don Miller said the level of use is not high but committee chairman Edward Ward-Harris pointed out its location at the shopping centre might not be the right one.

The board also decided to increase the rental charge for a projector and screen from $8 to $10 a day.

BCR to seek LRB action

B.C. Rail management will go before the Labor Relations Board to demand a full return to work on the government-owned railways, Labor Minister Jack Heinrich said today.

The minister said he expects the joint council of rail unions to back up management's demand that members of the United Transportation Union stop picketing and go back to their jobs.

The joint council was meeting today in Vancouver.

Heinrich, who put together the agreement that was to end the month-long BCR strike, said he will not become involved in the application to the LRB.

UTU members are objecting to changes in method of payment designed by Heinrich, but the minister said he won't make any changes in his settlement proposal.

"I am not prepared to negotiate the proposal of settlement under any circumstances," he said. "That was well thought out. It was extremely fair.

"I think you will find, when everything settles down, that by far the majority of train men are pleased with the proposal."

The minister said when the unions agreed to put his settlement package before their members, they also agreed to return to work and he expects that commitment to be honored.

"It is interesting to note there are a number of statesmen in the trade union movement who are saying that what is happening now is unacceptable practice," he said.

Disgruntled members of the United Transportation Union set up picket lines Tuesday night at the BCR yard at Squamish, 60 kilometres north of Vancouver.

There was no work being done at Squamish, but trains from North Vancouver were moving through without difficulty early today.

The settlement to end the crippling strike, had suggested workers be paid overtime based on hours worked. Trainmen want overtime calculated by hours and distance.

Members of the union say that under Heinrich's proposal they could lose up to $120 a week in overtime pay.

The spokesman said the union is taking the action to force Heinrich to order rail employees back to work by invoking the Essential Services Act and thereby returning their previous overtime pay rights.

Heinrich had resisted demands from forest industry leaders and Interior community mayors to order rail employees back to work to end the crippling economic effects of the strike.

He said he favors a settlement reached through the bargaining process.

Rail employees had returned to work Tuesday morning but the truce was a shaky one.

A union spokesman said although the men went back, this did not mean that they were happy .

Liberals widen Gallup lead

OTTAWA (CP) — Three weeks after the Feb. 18 election was called, the Liberal party had marginally stretched its lead over the Progressive Conservatives from 20 to 21 percentage points, according to a Gallup poll released today. (Other election stories on pages 41 and 42).

The poll, by the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion, conducted Jan. 3-5, shows the Liberals are supported by 49 per cent of Canadians who have made up their minds on how they are going to vote. That is an increase of two per cent since the December survey.

The Conservatives have the support of 28 per cent of the decided vote, up from 27 per cent in December, while the New Democratic Party checked in with 20 per cent, a drop of three points in the intervening month.

In Toronto, Clark said on an open-line radio show that the Conservatives do not consider them[illegible] as indicated in [illegible]. He said he made a mistake after his election "in paying too much attention to government and not enough to public relations."

The major change discovered by the polls took place in the undecided category. In December, 27 per cent of the voters had not made up their minds or would not say who they would support if an election were called.

In January, that figure dropped to 20 per cent.

The worst news for the Conservatives came in the regional breakdown of the figures, which showed them trailing the Liberals badly in strategic Ontario, which elects 95 of the 282 MPs in the House of Commons.

The Gallup poll indicated the Liberal lead in Ontario is only slightly less than the 20-point margin they enjoy in the country as a whole.

In Quebec, which sends 75 MPs to the Commons, the Liberals held a mammoth lead. Gallup found they had the support of 75 per cent of the decided electorate, compared to 61.9 per cent in the last election.

In the West, the Conservatives remain ahead but their lead has been pared about five per cent.

'Big bucks' on 17-hour work days

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ray Rebagliati is a hard-working conductor on the B.C. Railway — so hard-working that he grossed $69,500 last year.

He earned his money by working about 17 hours a day, seven days a week, 10 months of the year on work trains along the northern sections of the line.

"You have to work to make big bucks and retire early," he says. "You have to get your fanny away from home, the television set, the beer hall and the pool room."

Rebagliati, 55, had planned to retire on a $1,400 a month pension this spring until his work was interrupted by the lengthy B.C. Rail strike. Now he says he'll delay retirement so that he can collect another $209 a month under the early retirment proposal made by the railway.

The railway wants to reduce train crews to three from four men by eliminating one of two brakemen through attrition. It has proposed early retirement for 38 trainmen, based on seniority.

Rebagliati, who's fourth from the top in seniority, would be among those eligible for the benefit, but he has to wait for a government fact-finder to sort out the issues, including safety, and make recommendations by Sept. 30.

Rebagliati says the long hours of work were not difficult.

"I'm always up at five in the morning and never sleep more than five hours a day while working or on holidays."

Rebagliati is "as rare as a dinosaur walking down Granville Street in 1980," said Norm Farley, chairman of the Joint Council of Railway Unions.

"I doubt if there are more than one in 1,000 making that kind of money," Farley said.

However, Rebagliati says he knows an engineman who lives in West Vancover and made $65,000 last year despite working one month less than he did.

Carter may restore draft

Times News Services

In the face of the Soviet Union's muscle-flexing in Afghanistan and the anti-American challenge in Iran, President Carter is thinking about bringing back draft registration.

Administration and White House officials said the president has looked into the possibility of unveiling a registration proposal in his State of the Union message Wednesday night, but they denied knowing his decision.

They said the proposal considered by the president would require men between the ages of 18 and 26 to register for the draft.

The military-age men might also be required to take physical examinations, but could not be actually drafted or inducted into the armed services.

The Selective Service Act gives the president the authority to order registration and examination, but an act of Congress is required to reimpose the actual draft.

The proposal, officials said, was independent of a military mobilization study being completed by the White House at the request of Congress.

All branches of the military fell short of recruitment goals for fiscal 1979, for the

Cab firms want 26% fare hike

Bluebird Cabs and Victoria Taxi Ltd. have applied to city hall for an increase in rates of about 26 per cent.

W.B. Woodward and J.F. MacLean, on behalf of the two companies and the Greater Victoria Taxi Owners Association want the mileage charge increased from 90 cents a mile to 70 per kilometre or approximately $1.13 per mile.

The flag fall would increase to $1.10 from $1 and waiting time would increase to $15 an hour from $12.

Th existing rates were set in March last year but taxi owners claim rising costs have forced them to apply for another rate hike. They claim their profit margin is only 3.2 cents per dollar.

The cab owners are also asking for a moratorium on any future increases in the number of taxi licences issued by the city.

Gold rebounds after nosedive

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold rebounded in late European trading today and neared the $700 U.S. mark after dropping below $600 in early trading. The U.S. dollar was mixed.

The afternoon fixing price for gold in London was $695 U.S. — $807 Canadian — a troy ounce, up sharply from the $585 low reached earlier in the day in European trading as Tuesday's price slide continued.

The gold price dropped $209.65 in Hong Kong to close at $624.74 an ounce. The metal had opened in the Far East centre at $685.48 and fell all day.

Bullion opened in London at $615 and Zurich at $605 and dropped as low as $585 before making a comeback. The morning fixing price in London was $650 an ounce.

Clerk foils holdup

A 16-year-old boy faces an attempted holdup charge after a pedestrian grabbed him Tuesday afternoon as he fled a corner grocery store in Fairfield.

City police said a youth walked into the C & K Market, 451 Cook, at 3:55 and demanded money, pretending he had a weapon in a paper bag.

But the woman clerk refused and ran outside screaming for help, the youth right behind.

A passerby grabbed him and held him until police arrived.

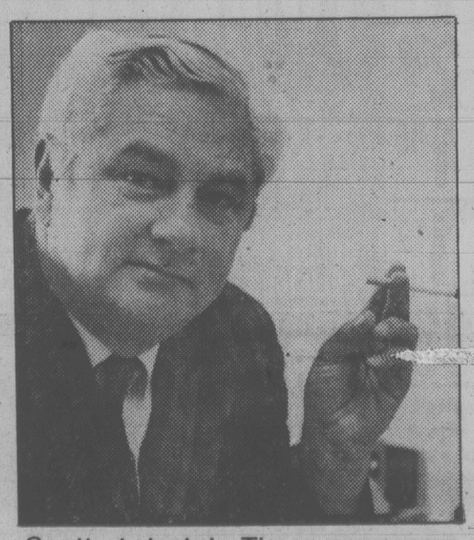
Police said a knife was found inside the bag.

Fog stops air traffic

All flights at both the Inner Harbor and Victoria Airport were cancelled this morning after fog cut visibility to zero.

The B.C. Ferries service was not interrupted except for the Brentwood-Mill Bay ferry, which is without radar.

Fog over the Vancouver area also made driving hazardous and delayed some flights to and from Vancouver International Airport.



Scott at desk in Times newsroom

Death takes Jack Scott, 64

Jack Scott, award-winning journalist and former Times columnist, died Tuesday at his Salt Spring Island home. He was 64.

He had suffered two strokes in the past seven years and had been ill for several months.

Scott came to the Times in January, 1970, after 40 years [illegible] business and a distinguished career which took him around the world and put him on the scene of many major historical news events.

He wrote a daily column in the Times until about four years ago, the topics and approach varying from a serious look at social and political issues of the day to a gentle, humorous view of everyday problems and situations or an insightful poke at some sacred cow.

Following his retirement, he continued up until a short time ago to write book reviews for the newspaper and occasional articles for the Vancouver Sun.

Scott was born in Vancouver, the son of a newspaperman, and he began his career early starting out as a copy boy for the News Herald in Vancouver when he was 15.

He soon became the city editor and worked alongside a man who was also to become a well-known Canadian writer, Pierre Berton.

Scott wrote a column called Our Town in the News Herald for three years.

During the Second World War, he served four years in the Canadian Army. He enlisted in the Intelligence Corps and was later attached to the Public Relations section. In this capacity he broadcast from the Western Front for a year for the BBC and the CBC.

He then became editor of the Maple Leaf, the Canadian Army newspaper in London and in Germany. He was discharged in Vancouver with the rank of captain.

Scott then joined the Vancouver Sun, and in June, 1946, began writing his Our Town column which became widely read.

More than 12 years later, September, 1958, he was appointed the Sun's managing editor by publisher Donald Cromie.

The posting only lasted for about five months but as one newspaperman who remembers says "they were wild and crazy times and everyone had a ball."

Scott, for example, tossed established practices to the winds and sent his sports editor to interview Chiang Kai-shek and his women's page editor to Cuba to cover the aftermath of the revolution.

It all came to an end when Scott was appointed the Sun's London correspondent.

During his career, he won a number of awards including the National Newspaper Award of 1954 for a moving series of articles on racial unrest and tribal revolt in Africa. In 1957 a series on Duplessis' Quebec regime earned him a Bowater award. The series was considered perhaps one of the finest pieces of investigative reporting in Canadian newspaper history.

In 1971 he won the top Mac-

Millan Bloedel prize for an eight-part series in the Times titled: "Victoria — A Search for Identity."

At one stage, he worked for the Toronto Star and in 1964, at the age of 49, he was appointed the paper's Latin American correspondent, based in Rio de Janeiro.

Among the stories he covered during his career were the Torrey Canyon oil spill off Land's End, the Aberfan disaster when Welsh children were buried under a slag heap, the Six Day War in Israel, the military overthrow of half a dozen elected South American governments, the Cuban revolution, the apartheid situation in South Africa and an early look at separatism in eastern Canada.

Those who knew Scott say he was a shy, reserved man.

He enjoyed playing golf and shot in the 80s when he was in his prime. Earlier in his life, he was a keen fisherman spending time on the water around his Salt Spring home near Vesuvius Bay.

He also had a reputation as an ardent, shrewd poker player.

"I think what really distinguished him as a columnist was his terrific change of pace," says Times Page Five editor Peter Murray, who came to know Scott better than most people at the paper.

"Jack could be political, angry, philosophical, humorous — a different style all the time."

Another distinguishing feature was that Scott never attacked people, says Murray.

"He was tough on issues but never personally abusive. Basically a very gentle man.

"He liked people.

"He didn't like savaging people like many columnists nowadays do. The trend now is to attack personalities rather than issues."

Jack Webster, former radio hotline host now with B.C. Television, was a good friend of Scott's and a neighbor of his on Salt Spring.

"Canada has lost one of the best newspapermen, columnists and essayists of the century," he said in an interview today.

Webster worked with him for a number of years on the Sun and described Scott as a member of that great coterie of old-time newspapermen.

"He was colorful, flamboyant and had a touch of humanity.

"There isn't a newspaperman in the country with his kind of concern for people.

"He was a left-wing humanist."

Cromie, interviewed today at his Vancouver home, described Scott as "a delightful person."

"He was one of the great writers this city has seen," he added.

"Jack was a shy person," Cromie recalls, remembering one incident when Scott was to receive a civil liberties award at the University of B.C.

Scott came into the publisher's office concerned about having to give a speech at the presentation.

A bottle of whisky was brought out "to shore up Jack so that he could give his little speech."

"Well, Jack drank his way right through lunch and never did get out of there."

Cromie said time didn't mean too much to Scott and sometimes, even on assignment he would vanish and send back the most incredible notes saying he "fell in with thieves in northern Ontario or something."

"I would say that Jack was so much of an individualist that he is difficult to compare with anybody else," Cromie said.

Himie Koshevoy, who was Scott's city editor at the Sun for a time, said he was a "great guy, a great feature writer."

"He had the ability to find stories almost everywhere.

"He could write seriously and bring tears to your eyes or make you laugh.

"He had a great way with words."

Scott is survived by his wife of 41 years, Grace; three married daughters, Judy, who lives with her husband in South Africa; Jill (Fowles) of Victoria; and Jenny (Walsh), who lives on Salt Spring. There are four grandchildren.

The funeral service was a private, family affair held Tuesday at Scott's home.

Carter considers draft

first time since the draft ended in 1973. But defence department officials said Tuesday that the Pentagon has sent no staff papers recommending a renewal of registration to the White House.

However, senior military officers, particularly army generals, have said peacetime registration is necessary to ensure enough military manpower to fill out regular forces in an emergency.

In his State of the Union address today, Carter is expected to disclose a long-range plan for containing the Soviet Union in Southwest Asia following its military move into Afghanistan.

In the address to Congress, Carter will outline a new doctrine for the area which is likely to stress a buildup of U.S. military strength and appeal to countries in the region to resist any further Soviet moves there.

The Tass news agency said Tuesday that U.S. President Jimmy Carter's statement Monday on the need to keep the U.S. the strongest nation in the world "sets up an overt U.S. claim to world domination."

In a dispatch from Washington, Tass said the president was proclaiming "a course towards confrontation and renunciation of the achievements of detente and putting forward a conception of reliance on U.S. military might and strength."

The report also said the Carter statement shows that the United States intends "to carry on the policy of military and economic blackmail with regard to Iran" by saying that the Soviet Union represents a threat to Iran.

In related developments:

— President Carter's call for a boycott of the summer Olympic Games in Moscow, condemned by European Olympic committees, is picking up support from foreign governments and political parties.

Britain, China, Australia and New Zealand gave their conditional backing Tuesday to Carter's proposal for the boycott unless Soviet troops withdraw from Afghanistan by Feb. 20.

But France formally accepted Tuesday the invitation to participate in the games.

— a Soviet shipping official charged today that U.S. Air Force planes have begun "provocative" buzzing of Soviet merchant ships, flying as close as 25 yards to some vessels, the Tass news agency reported.

Tracy works on waitress Janie Scott, a pack-a-day smoker

She'll help you boot that awful habit

By PAT DUFOUR

An "evangelist" swept into Victoria this week spreading the gospel on National Non-Smoking Week which is in full swing.

She's Marie Tracy, "smoking cessation consultant" with the provincial health ministry's Action B.C.

"I lost a brother through lung cancer and I became an evangelist," says Tracy who is a bundle of nicotine-free energy.

Not that she's much different from millions who have tried to kick the habit.

It took her "six years and about 2,000 tries" before she finally made it.

She went to train as a group leader in New York with Smokewatchers, a commercial company that was "very unsuccessful because people won't pay to stop smoking."

But for Tracy there was no turning back. Her war on tobacco was on.

She received more than 1,500 letters when she appeared on CBC's Hourglass in 1973, and in 1975 she developed the program Operation Kick It for the B.C. Lung Association.

In a whirlwind visit to Victoria on Tuesday she came armed with two other programs she's also developed. One is A Do-It Yourself Quit Smoking Course. It's available for 50 cents and can be obtained by writing Action B.C., 1600 West 6th Avenue, Vancouver, V6J 1R3.

The other program BUTT OUT! is free and comes with a training manual. It is aimed at senior secondary school students.

"It's no good working on junior secondary students when it's their big brothers and sisters that are smoking," Tracy says.

The program is being run in eight Vancouver schools and Tracy explained the program to school authorities here during her visit.

She also visited Victoria General Hospital, Royal Jubilee Hospital and Saanich Peninsula Hospital to talk to staff.

Tracy says there are three stages in her programs for quitting smoking.

The first helps smokers "get psyched up for quitting." She suggests a 21-day period in which to prepare and gradually cut down.

Then comes the time to quit and deal with the "very definite withdrawal that people suffer."

Finally comes the stage where the would-be non-smokers "learn to adjust their thinking to be able to live in a society that's full of cigarettes," Tracy says.

At this stage people learn how to deal with weight problems, find other ways to use their time and energy and are introduced to new lifestyle concepts, such as practising good nutrition.

"We're trying to help people get healthy and teach them to maintain that health."

Slashed pay proposed for development work

By AL FORREST

Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce today unveiled a plan to cut salaries for the region's industrial development commissioner by $20,000, freeing extra money for external promotion.

The chamber is offering to run the commissioner's office on a contract basis and has submitted its plan to the Capital Region District.

Chamber president Cedric Steele today said the chamber would devote a maximum of $22,000 to salaries.

When the economic development function was run last year by the four core municipalities, they paid commissioner Barry Mayhew and his secretary $42,972 in salaries and benefits.

"That left only about $6,000 for external promotion. We believe you can't do much promoting on only $6,000."

Steele said the chamber could reduce costs by using some of its existing facilities and by giving extra duties to Brian Small, the chamber's full-time manager.

In a proposed budget, the chamber would add a research worker on a salary of $15,000 plus a half-day secretary for $7,000. This would leave $32,400 for external promotion.

Steele said if the chamber's proposal is accepted, it will work this way:

There will be a vigorous external promotion campaign, including advertisements in selected business publications.

Anyone inquiring about industrial or commercial opportunities would direct his inquiries to the research worker, who would assemble the facts from research already compiled by the provincial government, the region, the municipalities and other planning organizations.

The research worker would then forward this information to the businessman, inviting him to Victoria.

Upon his arrival he would be met by Small, the chamber manager, who would help him to meet the officials he would have to deal with.

The research worker could obtain any additional information he might require.

Steele said the chamber had high hopes for an industrial development commissioner when it first proposed the idea in the mid 1970s.

But, as it turned out, little has been achieved so far.

And since the resignation of Mayhew the office has been floundering, Steele said.

The commission was originally financed by the provincial government and the core municipalities but now the function has been transferred to the CRD.

Chimney blamed in Langford fire

A faulty chimney was blamed for an early morning fire that caused $2,000 to $2,000 damage to a house at 963 Bray in Langford.

Chief Al Le Quesne said the fire likely smouldered for several hours before owner Robert Hillard saw smoke coming from under the floor boards near the fireplace about 3 a.m.

Le Quesne went to investigate at Hillard's request and when he got into a crawl space found the floor joists on fire.

It took firemen nearly two hours to put out the blaze.

Le Quesne said the masonry chimney had been improperly constructed and a portion of the firebox had been built directly on the sub-flooring.

It was the second such fire in Langford this week. On Sunday about $1,000 damage was done when fire broke out in the studding around a masonry chimney at 825 Goldstream.

RCV future still misty

The future of the Racquet Club of Victoria is still undecided, Racquet Club Holdings Ltd. president Don Francis said today.

The board executive met Tuesday to discuss three proposals but didn't reach any conclusions.

Racquet Club of Victoria Holdings Ltd. owns the club.

Another meeting is scheduled for Feb. 5, Francis said.

Members of the executive are examining an offer by Saanich to assume the club's $850,000 mortgage debt and turn the facility into a public recreation centre.

Another proposal under discussion is an offer by a private developer but Francis won't release details.

The third alternative is an attempt by leaseholders of the Racquet Club of Victoria Society to save the facility by raising money from the sale of $750 preferred shares.

Society financial director David Moore said earlier this week the club hasn't raised the $200,000 it needs to make a purchase offer, but a number of applications have been sent to interested members.

Francis said the holdings company rejected two earlier proposals from the private sector because they involved commercial development of part of the site.

Concord Developments came up with a proposal to build a 150-unit motel on the site and lease the tennis courts, curling rink and gymnasium back to the society.

That proposal and a similar offer were turned down because the holdings company is primarily interested in keeping the club intact as a recreational facility, he explained.

Saanich is hoping to get a government grant to help it acquire the facility and is still waiting to hear from Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe.

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis said recently the most the municipality can hope for is a one-third grant under the province's Recreation Assistance Program.

Insurance proposed for auxiliaries

Saanich police board is recommending the core municipalities take out insurance to cover unprotected auxiliary police officers.

Chief Robert Peterson will discuss insurance in case of injury and death with Greater Victoria area police chiefs.

The board has been told by the attorney-general's ministry it will not assist municipalities in insuring the officers.

Drowning victim found

The body of a 52-year-old man who drowned with his wife last Friday when their small boat capsized in Sooke basin was found Tuesday.

Sooke RCMP said two civilian divers located the body of Louis Planes shortly after 2 p.m. under submerged logs between Hutchinson and Cooper's coves where the boat sank.

The body of Planes' wife, Barbara, 50, was found Sunday under a nearby log boom.

Coroner Roy Girling will announce later whether he will hold an inquest.

Refit job to Yarrows

The Yarrows shipyard of the Burrard Yarrows Corporation has been awarded a $642,856 contract for the refit of the destroyer-escort HMCS Terra Nova, Progressive Conservative Esquimalt-Saanich candidate Donald Munro said today.

He said the Esquimalt yard's bid was the lowest received.

The Terra Nova will go into refit on Jan. 28. The job is to be completed March 21.

11.7% budget increase for western recreation

By BRENDA DALGLISH

The Juan de Fuca Parks and Recreation Commission has approved a 1980 budget of nearly $2.3 million — an increase to taxpayers of 11.7 per cent.

The budget, approved unanimously by the commission, calls for spending of $2,296,790.

Of that, $1,393,930 will come from Metchosin, Colwood and Langford property taxes while the remainder will be collected from miscellaneous sources such as user fees and grants from the provincial government.

The budget now goes to the Capital Regional Board for final approval.

The commission at its regular monthly meeting Tuesday was presented with a budget that was 17.3 per cent higher than last year's $2,054,010.

Parks and recreation administrator Doug Ruttan, however, told commission members if they wanted to reduce the increase he could pare about $66,500.

Ruttan suggested cutbacks on such things as construction of a road in Juan de Fuca Park, purchase of four sets of outdoor bleechers, construction of a playing area near the Little League baseball diamond and landscaping of tennis courts which will be built this year.

... cuts possible

Commission member Dick Emery suggested the commission consider financing such capital projects as construction of a lacrosse box and tennis courts instead of paying for the work out of the commission's operating budget.

But commission chairman Howard Drummond disagreed.

"I'd like to see us keep away from getting in debt for those things and incurring the interest cost on borrowed money. I think we're really doing the community a service if we don't finance them," Drummond said.

"But if we put things off and they cost more money to build when we do get around to them, then we're not really losing any money by financing them," said Emery.

The commission agreed to consider financing large capital expenditures.

The commission is responsible for recreation programming in Colwood, Langford and Metchosin.

UTA takes over search for transit terminal

By NORMAN GIDNEY

The search for a downtown location for a new multi purpose transportation terminal has been taken over by the Urban Transit Authority and within two months a specific site will be named, a UTA official said Tuesday.

Assistant general manager Larry Miller said the provincial government asked the UTA to find a location quickly so funds can be included for the project in the 1980-81 B.C. budget now under preparation.

"We must very quickly act on the problem," he told the central business district advisory committee of Victoria city council.

Pacific Coach Lines' lease on its present terminal behind the Empress Hotel expires in July, 1981, and the CPR will not extend it.

The UTA got involved when the Crown corporation asked for cabinet approval for money for a new terminal of its own.

Miller said the deputy minister of municipal affairs asked the UTA in on Dec. 1 because local officials had been urging that all bus and rail transportation be combined in a single terminal.

"They were anxious to avoid duplication of costs," he said.

The authority sent a questionnaire at the end of December to the major commercial airlines and float plane operators, the bus companies (including tour operators), taxi owners and VIA Rail, which operates the E & N passenger service, asking for their requirements and comments.

Preliminary results indicate a need for co-ordination of available services, Miller said, a need "for a central place where people can go for transportation information."

The UTA is also drawing on the assistance of Victoria traffic engineer Derek Wilds staff and other municipal personnel in drafting the report, Miller said.

The UTA should have narrowed down the criteria for choosing a site by mid-March will have narrowed down the hunt to a specific location.

The E & N committee and Mayor Bill Tindall of Victoria have in the past suggested the block opposite the Labatt's brewery on Government and the block immediately east of city hall. Both are mostly vacant.

The UTA study will be submitted to the transit committee of the Capital Regional District board, chaired by Mayor Tindall, for a technical review. Miller also invited any submissions which downtown businessmen or other interested groups may have.

Before the UTA got involved, the PCL was believed to be pushing for only a short move to provincial government property at Humboldt and Blanshard, which is now a parking lot.

Miller said later in an interview the UTA could end up as the owner and operator of the new terminal building, leasing space to PCL for its inter-city bus service, to B.C. Hydro for local bus operations, to tour operators, VIA Rail and others.

But if the study determines that a new terminal is required only for PCL the transit authority probably would bow out. Miller described the UTA's role in the planning as mainly that of facilitator or catalyst.

'Ignorance and money'

CALGARY (CP) — A city antique dealer says Calgary is a perfect target for fraudulent art salesmen "because we've got the perfect combination here — money and ignorance."

Herbert Schwarz says many paintings and antiques decorating some of the city's most elegant homes are likely fakes.

"The amount of fake antiques, paintings and other art works sold in this city is simply astounding."

Most of the fakes are being sold by out-of-town operators who come to Calgary to hold an auction or sale, he said.

Student wins award for bravery

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary student Dave Pocock received an award this week for bravery in saving a man from a burning vehicle. Pocock, a student at the Southern Alberta Institute of Technology, received a certificate of exceptional recognition from police chief Brian Sawyer. The award was for his actions Nov. 24 in saving Louis Knafla from his burning van which had been struck from behind on Macleod Trail.

Annexation 'ruthless land grab'

LEDUC, Alta. (CP) — Edmonton's annexation bid is nothing but a "ruthless land grab" engineered by "empire builders," says Leo LeClerc, former provincial assistant deputy minister of transportation.

LeClerc told an annual chamber of commerce meeting in this community south of Edmonton that the city's application was ridiculous.

"If successful, it would put Edmonton in authority of a land mass two-thirds the size of Rhode Island. Why should they stop there? Why don't they take the whole province?"

Safety padding urged in gyms

WINNIPEG (CP) — A provincial court judge has recommended safety padding be installed on the walls of school gymnasiums following the death of a basketball player Walter Pesclovitch, 22, in a senior men's game Nov. 3 at Precious Blood school. Pesclovitch tumbled into a cement wall of a city gym.

Judge Theodore Lismer also recommended after an inquest that future gyms be built with a three-metre clearance on either end of a basketball court to the wall of the gym. The minimum distance required under existing provincial statutes is one metre.

Centre for 'really bad apples'

EDMONTON (CP) — A single, tough treatment centre for the "really bad apples" among Alberta's juvenile delinquents may soon be necessary, Stanley Mansbridge, social services deputy minister, says. Such a centre, similar to the tough British training school Borstall or the old Alberta centre for delinquents at Bowden, may be needed to protect less serious delinquents at provincial youth centres, he said.

Buffalo jump 'threatened'

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta historic sites board says one of the earliest known buffalo jumps on the continent is threatened by a proposed high-voltage power line.

Radiocarbon dating shows that for at least 6,000 years Indians slaughtered buffalo below the standstone cliff at the Head-Smashed-In jump 35 kilometres west of the southwestern Alberta community of Fort Macleod.

While there are older remains of Indian culture in Alberta "this marked the start of a new technology, a whole new way of life in Western Canada," Dr. William Byrne said in an interview.

"It's the earliest example of this kind of thing anywhere," said Byrne, director of the Archaeological Survey of Alberta.

He said Calgary Power Ltd. proposes to hang a string of 500,000-volt power lines over the cliff, an unacceptable intrusion of 20th century technology into an almost pristine setting.

Banker sees on-farm computers

SASKATOON (CP) — The biggest structural change in Saskatchewan agriculture may be happening under farmers' noses, George Lee, head of agricultural economics at the University of Saskatchewan, told about 400 of those farmers.

They heard Ed Baskier of Winnipeg, assistant general manager of agricultural services for Toronto Dominion Bank, say inflation and high interest rates will lead to more use of on-farm computers, expanded bank services for agriculture and other changes in methods of financing.

Drawing on provincial government figures, Lee said the 55 million acres of farm land in the provinces rose in value by an estimated $2.8 billion to $3.4 billion last year.

During the year, farmers earned a realized net income of $1.04 billion.

The gap followed five years in which net income and increase in land value were approximately equal, totalling $5.4 billion and $5.5 billion respectively.

The result, Lee told agriculture graduates meeting on the final day of the University of Saskatchewan's farm and home week, is that "you're getting a price of land two or three times greater than our cash flow can support."

The hidden but real income from rising land prices is largely free from liability to capital gains tax because of various deductions. A provision in the failed Progressive Conservative budget would have created a further exemption.

"If your income's coming from here and it's tax-free," Lee said, "you're pushing the guy out who's just getting started."

A continuation of the trend would mean "only a very select group of people" would be able to afford Saskatchewan farm land, already beyond the means of many young would-be farmers.

Lee said farmers should at least realize that increasing land prices can change the structure of Prairie agriculture.

He said product prices have risen more rapidly than input costs in the last decade but farmers have taken to buying more of those inputs. They include machinery, fertilizer and other production tools.

Costs and prices had squeezed nearly as close together at the end of the decade as they had been at the start, when heavy world grain stocks caused badly depressed prices.

Comparing average costs and returns from 1972-74 with the moving average covering the last five years, his gross returns had gone up 45 per cent but his net return had declined by 23 per cent.

"It looks like a real kamikaze situation, doesn't it?" he asked.

Baskier predicted heavier capital requirements will force growth of farm units through expansion of multiple ownership.
